Davis Stripped of Power, But Bennett Keeps Mum

PREMIER BENNETT sworn in by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen

Premier Bill Bennett today took over Jack Davis' cabinet job but still refused to give specific reasons for dumping the minister of energy, transport and communications.

A grim-faced Bennett announced the firing of Davis Monday, saying only he had taken the action after learning that Davis was being investigated.

Davis has also been stripped of his directorships — Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will become the government director on the board of B.C. Hydro and Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf takes over Davis' position on the B.C. Harbors Board.

Bennett was sworn in by Lieut.-Gov. Walter Owen in a brief ceremony this morning at Government House.

The premier again refused to answer questions concerning Davis' removal.

"The legislative assembly has been notified with what limited information I had. I think my statement was very clear," Bennett said.

Asked if he will make a more detailed statement soon, the premier said only he might.

The premier said his new portfolio will only be temporary. "I do not believe in dual portfolios."

He added he would be assuming the responsibilities of the ministry only as long as is necessary.

But he did say he will take the ministry's estimates through the House.

The premier stunned the legislature Monday afternoon by announcing he had called in Davis and asked him to resign his portfolio.

The only reason given by Bennett was that he had learned of an investigation over the weekend touching on the minister.

Bennett almost ran along the hallway outside the chamber after his announcement and refused to answer a barrage of questions fired at him by reporters.

The firing left other cabinet ministers and MLAs dumbfounded.

Bennett told the House the resignation was neither a prejudgment of the matter by him nor an admission by Davis.

"It is, however, in accordance with the requirements for membership in the executive council."

Bennett said to comment further on the investigation might compromise its eventual outcome.

But NDP leader Dave Barrett said the premier owes the legislature and the public a full explanation.

"If he (Bennett) lets it stand, it gives rise to rumors and speculation which is entirely unnecessary and should be stopped. The only way would be with a full explanation."

Davis himself said little to clear the situation.

He first refused comment, saying he didn't fully understand the allegations.

The minister then said he had no idea whether the probe was of a political, civil or criminal nature or if it touched on his former federal ministries or his provincial cabinet post.

"I've got some idea, but I would rather not comment until I'm sure of the facts. All my information has been third hand."

He said he will not quit his seat because to resign from the legislature would be to admit wrongdoing.

But he said he left the cabinet to clear the atmosphere in the legislature.

Davis said he is confident he will be cleared.

Asked if he expects to be back in the cabinet, he said: "I hope so."

He said he first learned of the investigation Monday morning from Bennett.

PSAC Phone Pressure

Federal public service employees were urged Monday night to use their telephones to put the heat on politicians over proposed labor law changes.

About 200 people at a Public Service Alliance of Canada rally were given Prime Minister Trudeau's office number as well as the numbers for the four Vancouver Island MPs and some of their constituency officers.

"I suggest we tie up their lines," said John Hart, regional PSAC representative.

He said the constituency offices get upset because they can't get any work done.

The object of the exercise is to get the politicians to scrap Bill C-28, an Act to amend the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

The union feels the amendments will destroy the government employees' collective bargaining system.

PSAC president Andy Stewart appeared on TV screens at the front of the Quadra Street Union Centre hall and in a tape-recorded message pleaded with the members to pressure politicians by mail and through personal contact.

Hart told the members he was shocked to hear from Donald Munro, Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, that he does not approve of collective bargaining for public service employees.

Prime Rate Up to 8½%

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada raised its trend-setting bank rate Monday to 8.5 per cent from eight per cent as federal money managers acted to counter downward pressures on the Canadian dollar.

The increase, the second since March 9 and effective today, was cited by opposition critics as evidence of mismanagement of the economy by the Liberal government.

The increase in the rate was followed by the chartered banks, which adjusted their rates on loans in accordance with the Bank of Canada rate changes. That means higher interest rates for mortgages and loans to farmers and business.

Following the Bank of Canada increase, the major chartered banks increased their prime lending rate today to 9¼ per cent from 8¾ per cent, effective April 5.

Most banks also increased the rate payable on non-chequing savings to 6¾ per cent, an increase of ½ of one per cent.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 7-100 at $0.8804.

The dollar closed below 88 cents U.S. Monday for the first time since mid-1933, the worst year of the Depression.

The announcement also came after Finance Minister Jean Chretien said the government will have a budget this month.

Chretien also said Monday that the government:

—Had increased the amount which it can withdraw under a standby credit arranged with the chartered banks to $2.5 billion from $1.5 billion. The credit was set up to help support the dollar.

—Would undertake further foreign borrowing to replenish U.S. dollar reserves that have dwindled as federal authorities purchased surplus Canadian dollars from money markets.

GOV'T IN RED BY $7.849B

OTTAWA (CP) — The government incurred a $7.849 billion deficit in the first 11 months of the 1977-78 fiscal year ending March 31, finance department figures released today indicate.

Government revenues in the first 11 months totalled $28.927 billion while spending was $36.776 billion.

For the same period in the previous fiscal year there was a deficit of $4.326 billion.

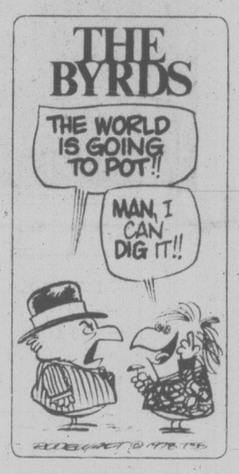
OTTAWA TOUTS REFERENDUM

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government moved Monday to arm itself against any fuzzy or unfair Quebec referendum on separation, introducing legislation that would allow it to hold its own opinion-sampling votes on constitutional questions.

Moments later, Marc Lalonde, intergovernmental affairs minister, made clear that the bill is designed primarily as a political weapon against the separatist Parti Quebecois government.

At a news conference, he challenged Premier Rene Levesque's Quebec government to adapt its own legislation on referendums in light of the federal model. The provincial bill, Lalonde said, "unduly restricts freedom of association and freedom of speech."

The legislation was immediately denounced by Levesque as "a pre-election ploy." Speaking to reporters in Montreal, the Quebec premier said Trudeau wanted to wear "the mantle of the savior of Quebec."



Tentative Carter Veto Of Neutron Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter has tentatively decided against the United States producing neutron weapons, it was learned today, although the West German foreign minister launched a last-minute drive to persuade Carter to modify that decision before it is officially announced.

As the West German official arrived, U.S. defence department sources said that in their view the president has not made a final decision on whether to order production of the weapon. Supporters of the weapon have said they would prefer that Carter defer any decision rather than rule against production.

At the White House, Carter official Claudia Townsend also denied that Carter has made any decision on producing the weapon.

However, it was understood that Carter relayed his tentative decision late last week to West Germany through Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher.

After that, West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's visit was arranged as a final effort by the West Germans to talk the Carter administration out of its decision against neutron weapons, it was learned.

Genscher will tell U.S. officials that West Germany supports production of neutron weapons, his political party's defence expert, Juergen Moellemann, said.

The neutron weapon has a relatively small explosive force, confined to a radius of about 180 to 270 metres. But it yields twice the radiation of a regular nuclear weapon.

Cut Federal Grants For Porn — MP

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal MP called Monday for parliamentary control over the Canada Council to stop it from subsidizing pornography.

Hugh Anderson (Comox-Alberni) said some of the books published by Blue Ointment Press in Vancouver, and financed by Canada Council grants, amounted to "degradation of the printed word."

In a reflection of complaints that have been heard from both sides of the Commons recently, he said that at a time when a Commons committee is urging new laws to control pornography, a government agency should not be financing pornography.

The Canada Council is an autonomous agency that provides grants, scholarships and fellowships for work in the arts, social sciences and humanities. But Anderson and others have said it should not be advancing pornography.

He said the government followed the philosophy that political parties should not decide what is art. But its good faith in appointing council members with knowledge of art had not been rewarded. It was time to give Parliament some control over the council, at least in appointing its members.

MPs such as Sinma Holt (L—Vancouver Kingsway), John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) and Jack Ellis (PC—Hastings) have complained most about books of poetry published by Blue Ointment Press, with names such as Street Flesh and Cock Tales.

The type of books published by this Vancouver firm "isn't even good pornography, it's bad pornography," Mrs. Holt said.

"I don't think anybody but the head of the Canada Council would see it as having any literary merit," she added.

NEWS BRIEFS

Deadly Seizure

BELFAST (Reuter) — Police in Northern Ireland said Monday they have captured a U.S.-built M-60 machine gun, the most deadly weapon held by the Provisional-wing Irish Republican Army (IRA). Security forces said the gun, which can fire 500 rounds a minute, is the only one of its type held by the IRA.

Bomb Blows

LONDON (AP) — A parcel bomb exploded at Communist party headquarters here today, injuring a caretaker, Scotland Yard said. A labor union office was evacuated when a second bomb was found in the mail.

Tunnel Planned

LONDON (AP) — Britain and France are planning to build a single-track tunnel underneath the English Channel at a cost of nearly $1-billion, or one-quarter the cost of a double-track project scrapped in 1974, the London Times reported today.

Spitting's Legal

HOQUIAM, Wash. (AP) — Expectorating on the streets of Hoquiam could cost you up to $500 and result in six months in the local jail until last Saturday. Now spitting is legal. A new city ordinance has removed the stiff sanctions.

Jetliner in Trouble

COLOGNE, West Germany (UPI) — A Spanish jetliner carrying 146 persons made an emergency landing at Cologne airport today, skidding down the runway after its landing gear collapsed and its engines burst into flames, authorities said. None of the plane's 139 passengers and seven crew members was injured.

Annie Surprises

Only a handful out of the thousands of entries in the Times-CJVI Academy Award contest correctly predicted Annie Hall, Richard Dreyfuss and Diane Keaton would win Oscars Monday night.

The Oscar to Annie Hall as best picture was the big surprise, and the big stumbling block for most entrants.

The draw for the trip for two to Hollywood will be made Wednesday, April 12, at the Capitol Theatre. Ten major secondary prizes will also be awarded at that time. Contestants do not have to be in attendance to win.

Invitations to the party are being mailed today and Wednesday. A total of 700 double passes are being awarded. Those who correctly guessed the three Oscar winners automatically qualify for a double pass.

Annie Hall, Star Wars Are Big Oscar Winners

Times News Services

HOLLYWOOD — Oscar celebrated his 50th birthday Monday night with a ceremony marked by political controversy and several major awards going to a man who was too nervous to show up.

Woody Allen's bittersweet remembrance of his life's love, Annie Hall, won four of the most important Oscars at the 50th Motion Picture Academy Awards show. Among them was Best Picture.

The 1977 runaway box office favorite, Star Wars, won six Oscars, most of them in technical categories, and a special award for sound effects.

Diane Keaton, a first-time nominee and Allen's former real-life sweetheart, was named Best Actress for her close-to-life portrayal of the flighty Annie Hall.

Richard Dreyfuss, also a first-time nominee, won a best actor Oscar for his portrayal of a frustrated actor sharing a New York apartment with an unwilling Marsha Mason in The Goodbye Girl.

Julia, a tale of underground efforts in Nazi Germany, based on a section of Lillian Hellman's Pentimento, won three Oscars, but another favorite, The Turning Point, was shut out.

There was controversy, courtesy of the best supporting actress winner, Vanessa Redgrave, for Julia. Miss Redgrave, whose nomination prompted protests from some quarters because of a pro-Palestinian documentary she financed, accepted her Oscar with the usual thanks and then told the academy:

"I think you should be very proud that in the last few weeks you've stood firm and you've refused to be intimidated by the threats of a small bunch of Zionist hoodlums whose behavior (here she was interrupted by a collective audience gasp) whose behavior is an insult to the stature of Jews all over the world."

Her comments later were attacked by playwright Paddy Chayefsky, who told the audience he was "sick and tired of people exploiting the occasion of the Academy Awards for the propagation of their own political propaganda."

He suggested to Miss Redgrave that "a simple thank you would have sufficed."

Outside, hundreds of Jewish and Arab protestors respectively denounced and praised Miss Redgrave.

THE OUTCASTS by Ben Wicks

One of the poems consisted largely of the words "it eat" repeated numerous times. Others were simply lists of obscenities.

Ellis feels so strongly that taxpayers should see what their tax dollars are paying for that he has offered to send copies of the poems to anyone who requests them. He says they "exemplify the highest grade of vulgarity that one could possibly imagine."

"One poem is merely a succession of four letter words dealing with slander against religion, speaks of body excretions and sex acts. . . ," he wrote in a recent newspaper article.

"One author has on four successive applications received grants for poetry that in each case is merely the stringing together of words of obscenity without apparent rhyme or reason."

Ellis says one person whose writing "would taunt the most liberated of minds" received a $12,000 grant and another Vancouver publishing house "has received at least $74,000 for the publication of obscene literature."

Fraser said in a letter to the editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail Monday he supports the council, but thinks sooner or later it must be called to account for the way it is spending taxpayers' money.

"What offends is the council's lack of judgment that confuses trash for quality," he wrote. "Unless the Canada Council exercises more common sense, the political pressure to question the council will most definitely increase."

Mrs. Holt said pressure already is growing among MPs, including Liberals, to gain more control over the council. She said she showed some of the Blue Ointment Press works to Prime Minister Trudeau and State Secretary John Roberts, whose department appoints the council members. She said they were both disturbed by the poems.

She agreed with the argument that the government should not decide what is art or culture.

But MPs were representatives of the people and "when people write to us and say they don't like the way their money is being spent, we have a duty to be sure that their money is being spent for something they want, not for something they find offensive."

She also resented "a few bureaucrats" deciding what was good for Canadians in the field of culture, adding she thought the council should be abolished.

"Canada Council grants aren't stimulating culture," she said. "I don't know of anyone who has achieved greatness through the Canada Council."

In an article in The Globe and Mail last week, William French took the Conservative MPs to task for "attempts to impose their narrow views on the rest of us."

"The Canada Council, if it is to function effectively, must be free of the political pressures that Ellis would subject it to," he wrote.

He said there is little possibility that the government will place controls on the council and quoted Robert Daudlin, Roberts's parliamentary secretary, as saying Parliament had decided that the secretary of state must not prejudge or second guess council grants.

Ray Noble Dies

LONDON (AP) — British musician Ray Noble has died of bone cancer in a London hospital, friends said Monday. Noble, 76 who was famous in both North America and Britain during the big-band era.

Lebanon Pull-Out By Israel

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel says it has started withdrawing from southern Lebanon, and a UN source says the invaders are pulling back to within five kilometres of the border.

An Israeli military communique said a "significant thinning out of forces" has been going on for a week as the Israelis were replaced by troops of the UN peacekeeping force.

The communique said non-essential units are being removed. The full withdrawal plan "will be made public only after the subject has been finalized with the UN authorities," it said.

In New York, UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said about 1,800 UN soldiers have been deployed so far and the other 1,200 will be in place by next week.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan was in Romania to meet with President Nicolae Ceaucescu, who has arranged past Arab-Israeli contacts.

UNITED WAY GIVING UP 7.2%

OTTAWA (CP) - Donations to the United Way of Canada increased in 1977 by 7.2 per cent to $71 million, it was announced Monday.

"This increase indicates a resurgence of interest by Canadians in taking a direct hand in funding human care services in their communities," president John Goldberg said in a statement.

The amount of money raised in the last six years has failed to keep pace with inflation, he said.

"Clearly, we are seeing a growth in the community's sense of responsibility for its own well-being, and less of a dependence on government programs."

Goldberg said new programs would deal with prevention of child abuse and wife battering, and unemployment.

A large upper trough off the west coast is expected to drift slowly eastwards but should steer an incoming frontal system southwards over the Pacific and weaken it significantly before it can reach the coast. This frontal system will likely brush the north coast Wednesday morning before the bulk of it is carried southwards around the upper trough.

Ottawa Looking Ahead To Oil-Gas Rationing

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government hopes to introduce legislation in the next session of Parliament giving it power to ration heating oil and gasoline if the need occurs.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, answering questions in the Commons, said such measures only would be used in an emergency.

"This is contingency planning and it is based upon an emergency not upon the normal course of events," Gillespie told Paul McRae (L—Thunder Bay).

Legislation giving the government powers to allocate oil products among consumers is being drafted in the energy department, he said.

McRae had asked the minister for comment on reports that a senior adviser in his department warned that the government is considering rationing by 1980.

But Gillespie said the adviser also had said the rationing only would come in the event of an emergency, such as world oil producing nations cutting off shipments of crude oil.

The government held allocation powers under the energy supplies allocation bill which passed in 1974 after Arab oil countries cut back shipments. But that legislation expired last June.

Top officials said at the time that draft legislation would be kept up to date within the department and could be introduced in Parliament immediately if the need arose.

Gillespie has said before he fears there is a 60 per-cent chance of an oil embargo by Arab countries by 1982 and that it is "almost certain before 1990."

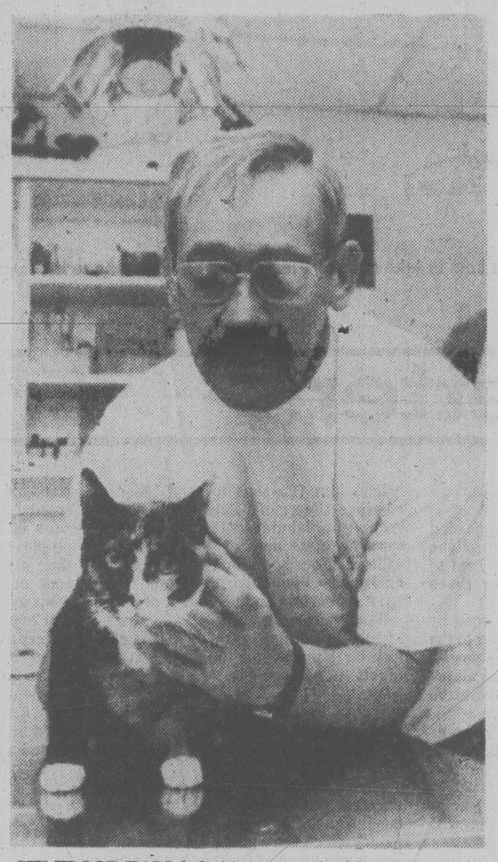
Carter Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter retuned home Monday from his visit to the Third World saying he has found nothing but friendship for the United States and the "day of the so-called 'Ugly American' is over."

"Most of all, I was proud as an American at the warmth of our reception," Carter said on his return to the White House from the 14,575-mile journey that took him to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria and Liberia.

On the final day of the trip Monday, Carter was met with a wild reception in Liberia where the presidential party had a four-hour stopover after a flight from Lagos, Nigeria. The government there declared a legal holiday and tens of thousands cheers, waved palm fronds and danced in the streets.

During the final leg of the trip, Carter issued a stern warning to South Africa that failure to accept reasonable proposals to end white rule in black Namibia, or South-Wrest Africa, might lead to serious trouble with the United States.



SIX-FLOOR FALL left this 18-month-old tortoise shell cat, held by Dr. Thomas Kalm, with only a fracturered pelvis. The veterinarian said the cat can walk, with a wobbly gait, and it is eating and drinking normally. A woman dropped the cat from the sixth floor of a Toronto apartment on Monday.

Nfld. Blast Puzzler

BELL ISLAND, Nfld. (CP) — "I heard a rumbling noise and then I saw a big ball of fire," Carol O'Brien said Monday in describing a blast that shook parts of this Conception Bay island community 25 kilometres north of St. John's Sunday.

The blast, said by RCMP to have been caused by balled lightning, shook houses in St. John's and led some persons to believe that a plane had crashed at St. John's airport.

Three chickens and a rat were killed in a small outhouse attached to a barn on property owned by James Bickford. Neighbors said Bickford could not be reached from St. John's because the blast had blown the phone off his wall.

The blast was being investigated by scientists from Memorial University but the university had no explanation by Monday. One university spokesman said the landing of a small meteor could have caused the noise and electrical discharge. Two holes in the ground also were being investigated.

Mrs. Edward Bennett of nearby Lance Cove said electrical outlets in some houses were blown from the walls by the blast.

"Just like a bomb," was how Mrs. Bennett described the noise.

Canadian Blocked From U.S. Hearing

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian diplomats advised a Canadian population expert Monday that he should not appear as scheduled this morning to testify before a U.S. congressional committee studying immigration policies.

Ivan Timonin, director of the demographic policy secretariat in Ottawa, said in an interview that the Canadian government does not want to set a precedent that might lead to Canadian officials testifying under oath before congressional committees on matters like the controversial former uranium cartel.

Congressional investigation of the international uranium cartel, which was promoted secretly by the Canadian government, produced Canada-U.S. friction last year as Ottawa accused Washington of meddling in Canadian affairs. The investigations touched on activities of U.S. subsidiaries in Canada.

Timonin said that as a result of the Canadian policy on appearances before congressional committees, he would not testify at formal committee hearings but still would be able to help it in other ways.

Fred Arnold, task force leader for the select committee on population of the House of Representatives, said the last-minute cancellation of Timonin's testimony would not seriously inconvenience the committee.

Arnold said Timonin gave him written material prepared for the cancelled appearance and that the material might be incorporated in the hearing record.

Committee staff also would send written questions to Timonin and consult him and his office informally.

Arnold explained that the committee wants information on Canadian immigration policy because Canada's immigration laws are based on demographic goals and labor force levels: "This is perhaps unique in the world."

In the material prepared for the committee, Timonin noted that under new immigration laws which take effect April 10, the immigration minister will set specific ceilings on annual immigration into Canada.

But the new laws, passed at a time of concern over large immigration levels, already may be outdated.

Timonin said immigrants to Canada are expected to be fewer than 100,000 this year, marking the fourth year in a row that immigration declined more than 20 per cent.

Immigration has averaged about 160,000 a year since the Second World War, a level government spokesmen have mentioned as the probable new ceiling under the new laws.

Timonin attributed much of the decline to the deterrent effect of Canada's weak economy, saying that "visible demand" for permission to come to Canada has declined substantially, falling to 478,916 last year from 620,554 in 1976, when the new immigration laws were passed by Parliament.

Actual immigration fell to 114,914 in 1977 from 218,465 in 1974.

PROGRESS MADE ON ARMS TALKS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The chief American negotiator at strategic arms limitation talks says the United States and the Soviet Union have reached accord on most provisions of a SALT II pact.

Paul Warnke said in a speech Monday at Columbia University that there is now a joint draft text of over 50 pages"that "resolves well over 90 percent of the issues."

Resolution of remaining issues is "obviously difficult," Warnke said. He did not specify areas of disagreement.

Warnke said that under the proposed agreement the United States "may not be able to claim ... strategic superiority," but "will not be at a strategic disadvantage."

He denied reports that SALT II talks are stalemated, saying there has been a great deal of progress. He added, "The Soviet Union has shown a great deal of responsiveness."

Wishful Thinking

No, this is not going to be a good session of the B.C. legislature. With the session scarcely three days old, it is already apparent that all the old rivalries and hostilities, all the gamesplaying and scandal-mongering, all the bitterness and vengefulness are still front and centre.

It seems remarkable, given the well-known zoo-like atmosphere that pervades the B.C. House, that every year as the session gets underway most legislative observers and many MLAs themselves actually become optimistic. This year, they say, the legislature is going to be a proper forum for public debate of important issues, not an exercise in insults, charges and countercharges. This year, the opposition is going to concentrate on providing constructive criticism of government policies and administration, not on attacking every government move as the downfall of democracy nor on searching for far-fetched scandals. And this year the government is going to listen to the opposition's criticisms and maybe even make a few changes on the basis of them, rather than dismissing them en masse as the ravings of sore losers or godless socialists.

After three days in the House, it is quite apparent that such optimism is (as always seems to be the case) nothing more than wishful thinking.

The first sign came right on opening day when NDP leader Dave Barrett labelled the speech from the throne as "the worst in 18 years." The speech was certainly nothing to write home about, but neither was it noticeably worse than any of the other vague, generalized throne speeches that have passed through the House in recent years. The penchant of the opposition for attack and exaggeration was already obvious.

If that left any room for doubts, they should have been cleared up on Monday when the first question period was held. In the 15 minutes allotted to questions, not more than three were taken up with substantive issues (those were occupied by Liberal leader Gordon Gibson who tried to extract some sense from Health Minister Bob McClelland about the problems, if there are any, of B.C.-trained audiologists).

For the rest, Dennis Cocke (NDP-New Westminster) asked questions about contributions to the Socreds' 1975 election campaign funds, questions that on the surface didn't make much sense although Cocke claims they are just the beginning of fascinating revelations; Walter Davidson (SC—Delta) tried to ask the NDP questions about its involvement (there wasn't any) in a union dinner at a non-union restaurant in Victoria last week.

Despite the best efforts of new Speaker Harvey Schroeder, there was no indication whatsoever that the session is going to be any more constructive than was the one in 1977, or 1976 for that matter.

We trust we aren't being totally unrealistic in expecting, more from our provincial legislators than the squabbling and infighting witnessed so far.

Long Green

Victoria is, like all other municipalities, in the midst of preparing a budget for the 1978 fiscal year, and having to wrestle with a finite amount of dollars in the budget and an ever-increasing number of supplicants for funds. It's hard to find the fat sometimes. Or is it?

The city is heir to some odd customs. For example, Victoria cuts the grass on some city boulevards. But only in some neighborhoods, and not always on both sides of the street. There are some weedy vacant lots in the city (formerly residential neighborhoods) which sport beautifully manicured strips of grass between the sidewalk and the street.

Then in other parts of Victoria, a city lawnmower comes by regularly in grass-growing season and cuts a swath a few feet wide along the front edge of homeowners' yards, though the sidewalk abuts the curb and a taxpaying resident could as easily push his mower up to the edge.

Is there a greenskeeping policy in Victoria? Is it consistently applied? Could not some money be saved if the city left it up to individual homeowners to cut their own grass along their property frontage, whether it is theirs or the city's?

It is a question of green, the lawn kind and the long kind.

"... before I show you how to take care of Pierre, how about trying to lift them off the ground? ..."

CLAUDE ADAMS

Big Posse Out for Jimmy's Scalp

WASHINGTON — After only 15 months in office, Jimmy Carter is already looking over his shoulder at an ever-growing posse of Republicans, and a perplexing Democrat, who are out after his job in 1980.

Apparently, the word is out that Carter is vulnerable. The first third of his term has been marked by stumbles and reverses in his foreign and domestic policies, and an inevitable plunge in his popularity rating.

Already labelled a one-term president by some White House observers, Carter must be watching the clamor with dismay. Those aren't footsteps he's hearing, but the rumbles of a small stampede as nearly a dozen hopefuls jostle for position.

Carter, it should be remembered, set his own sights on the White House as early as the winter of 1974, fully two years before the election.

Leading the pack at his heels are former president Gerald Ford, who has been logging more travel miles in the past year than he did when he was chief executive; Ronald Reagan, the messiah of the country's conservatives who indirectly controls nearly $1 million in political action cash; Senator Howard Baker Jr., one of the most influential members of the Senate; and Senator Robert Dole, Ford's running mate in 1976 who revelled in the national exposure he got in that campaign.

The Leaders

Close behind, and breathing hard, are Gov. James (Big Jim) Thompson of Illinois, a moderate with a lot of media appeal; John Connally, the one-time Texas governor and former secretary of the treasury whose strength lies in fund-raising; and George Bush, former CIA chief and senior Republican jack-of-all-trades with a lot of friends and favors due in the party.

A few other lesser Republicans are also kicking up dust, mindful of how Carter himself shot up from obscurity in his dramatic rush to the presidency in 1976. Among them is Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, a senator who has already formed a campaign committee and registered it with the federal election commission.

But perhaps Carter's biggest worry is the Democratic enigma from California, Gov. Jerry Brown, who stepped into the 1976 primary campaigns and created a splash that sent ripples of worry all the way to Plains, Ga. Brown, whose main strengh seems to be that he's such an unknown and unpredictable quality in Democratic circles, showed himself to be an attractive vote-getter in states as disparate as Oregon and New Jersey.

In the honored tradition of American politics, none of these men have declared themselves yet, and when asked about their presidential ambitions, they turn their eyes heavenward and give the kind of answers that only fuel speculation. Yet in different ways, they are all busy building the groundwork from which to launch a campaign for the White House.

Jerry Brown, even Sen. Lowell Weicker, are riding hard after Carter.

There's little Carter can do about the Republican threats, apart from strengthening his own position over the next 32 months. Yet within the Democratic party, the president has embraced a series of proposals that could make it harder for a Democrat to challenge him in 1980. For all practical purposes, the changes drafted by the commission on presidential nomination could effectively prevent another Carter-like phenomenon from ever happening again.

The proposals, to be debated by the Democratic party brass later this month, would shorten the length of the presidential primary season and make it harder for relative unknowns to engineer a steamroller campaign. Supporters say the new rules would restore to the party structure the power to select candidates, a power now largely in the hands of the voters at large and the media. The existing system, which Carter would like to change, was instrumental in getting him the Democratic nomination, allowing him to ignore the party power brokers and go directly to the people in one successful primary after another.

Carter's support for these and other changes has raised a great deal of skepticism about his motives, and some whispers about another "imperial presidency."

"They (the White House) want to make damn sure that no outsiders do to Jimmy Carter in 1980 what Jimmy Carter did to everyone else in 1976," said one commission member.

Yet it may take more than this bit of machiavellianism to derail Jerry Brown, the paradoxical westerner whose style of politics is often likened to that of an early Pierre Trudeau — the exercise of power tempered by a dash of zen, metaphysics and McLuhan.

When Brown, 40, talks about California and his political ambitions, a kind of Manifest Destiny seems to filter through.

"I haven't made definite judgments about what I'll be doing in 1980 and 1984," he says, "but what California does is very important for the rest of the country.

"Most of what occurs here — the problems and the opportunities — are reflective of what happens in the country and the world."

Brown is big on symbolism, often to the sacrifice of substance, critics say. Elected governor in 1974, he eschewed the million-dollar mansion built by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, and slept on a mattress in a $250 apartment. Instead of a limousine, he drove a Plymouth.

His administration has not been a particularly stellar one, although he has been politically astute enough to cash in on the important issues of the day.

He has proposed a stupendous energy program that calls for the spending of $500 million over five years, including coal gasification, geothermal power plants, a wood-burning plant, a methanol plant and a wind-generation experiment. Notably, the package stays well clear of nuclear power — a particular bugaboo in California.

In Washington earlier this year for the annual governors conference, Brown beat everybody to the press limelight — courting attention while the other governors were taking care of business.

Jerry Ford, the accidental president, has also been busy, dividing his time between golf tournaments and political appearances. Financially secure, and with his ex-president's staff of 14 people in Palm Springs, Calif., Ford has been on the road an average of 18 nights a month over the last six months.

Currently, he is seen as the major stumbling block to Regan's designs on the 1980 Republican nomination. Yet he is treading carefully, acting as much the elder statesman (college lectures, calculated opinions on Carter's presidency) as the politician who would be born again.

Ronald Reagan, at 67 the oldest and yet the strongest potential candidate, would like to try again after a narrow defeat to Ford at the convention in 1976. In the political action group called Citizens for the Republic, he has the core of a strong and well-monied political committee.

Reagan, a top draw at public events, preaches a straightforward message of law and order and his favorite target is "big government." His political column appears three times a week in 100 newspapers, and he has a daily radio commentary on 300 stations.

Like many of the other Republican hopefuls, Regan will be out this year accumulating IOUs in congressional elections and keeping a close eye on public opinion polls.

Dark Horse

The dark horse in the running is Jim Thompson, the candidate of bigness. At six feet six inches and 220 pounds, Thompson polled 1.4 million votes in a 1976 gubernatorial race in Illinois that provided some regional consolation for the otherwise battered Republicans.

Thompson, who autographed his high school yearbook by saying he would someday run for president, has been busy grappling with a Democratic legislature in Illinois. Depending on his success, and how he fares in his re-election attempt this year, Thompson could evolve into a hot prospect in 1980 or 1984, when he would be only 47.

To date, he has not made any political noises on national issues. But as Carter showed, it does not take very long to establish a high profile.

The mid-term congressional elections this year may be a good barometer of how the public really feels about Jimmy Carter's performance, and the strategies of the various Republican hopefuls in the next two years will be influenced by the outcome of these elections.

The Republican party, currently the rara avis of national politics, has money, issues and disaffection with Carter on its side. Inflation and a tattered foreign policy promise to be key issues in the remainder of the current administration, and unless Jimmy Carter scores a few major successes, someone will surely emerge from this hard-riding posse to trample him into the dust.

Slanted News

Senator Keith Davey, who headed the commission which examined the news media, stated that 82 per cent of the media were controlled by three groups.

His statement is aptly confirmed by your attitudes and editorials prior to the Oak Bay election as these three powerful groups are not interested in aiding the success of the NDP. Your editorial of March 18 came out in favor of the Liberal candidate. In addition, you published two vicious letters to the editor which included pictures of Bennett Camp and "NDP has totally failed to provide a credible or constructive opposition" and a picture of Carson with "Elect him (Carson) to send labor a message they can't flout the law and escape punishment." These phrases were from the pens of the two letters which I described above. You also included two much shorter letters from NDP supporters on the subject of Sherrell and patronage.

In your editorial of March 22, Don't look for Miracles, you make the statement "perceived inefficiency of the NDP."

Let us for a moment look at the true picture and see how inefficient was the NDP government during its 3½ years of office:

Three balanced budgets, apart from the redemption of millions in parity bonds and the acquisition of many companies which were going out of business and would throw several hundred workers on the unemployment rolls. These investments, apart from saving hundreds of jobs, are all doing well financially.

The B.C. Petroleum Corporation was formed and this has brought large sums to the provincial treasury.

Coal royalties were increased from 25 cents a ton to $1.50 per ton and were to be raised to $2.50 per ton on April 1, 1976 but, in spite of the agreement of the Kaiser Resources, this increase has never been implemented by the Socred government. Incidentally Kaiser Resources, which exploits our coal, made $60 million profit last year.

Mincome and Pharmacare were introduced for the elderly.

The most advanced labor legislation in the nation was introduced in the form of the labor code. Even the Socreds have not discarded this legislation.

The land commission was formed to protect our agricultural land and is, by far, the most advanced legislation of its kind in Canada.

ICBC was formed and had to be put into operation in a hurry as the private insurance companies pulled out. The Farm Income Assurance Act guaranteed farmers stable prices for their products. The Socreds are now trying to amend this legislation.

The royalties on minerals which were truly minimal but were resisted by the mining companies. Royalties work and are the basis of taxation on natural resources in so many countries with nonrenewable natural resources.

These are just a few of the achievements of the NDP during its 3½ years in office. There are many others but one reads very little about these achievements in the newspapers. However, one did read a great deal about so-called overruns by the NDP and financial mismanagement or, imaginary mismanagement. The Socred overruns, which exceed those of the NDP, apparently are the products of financial genius; at least this is what we read in the media. The NDP was inefficient and profligate and the Socreds are sacrosanct from a financial point of view. This is just nonsense. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1702 Cedar Hill X Road.

Parking Fable

There used to be an open parking area at Camosun College, surrounded by oaks and not unpleasant in a sort of undeveloped way. However, too many students had cars, so the authorities took half the lot, covered it with hardtop, fenced it, put in a meter and erected the usual signs carrying the dire warning that a local tow company would be watching for infractions. The towaway firm was most conscientious and towed off students' cars with commendable frequency. I observed an operator force entry into a locked car, but a call to the Saanich police soon enlightened me regarding the property rights of students versus the undisputed rights of the tow company.

As one might expect, students started to use the adjacent Watson and Dean Streets for parking. These were delightful little thoroughfares with an almost country lane look. Some residents objected, and one or more, having sufficient clout with the Saanich authorities, managed to get tall no-parking signs erected at 30-yard intervals down both sides of the streets. It is a pity that people cannot foresee the results of their actions. Camosun now has a hideous parking lot, many annoyed students and I doubt that the tolls collected will ever pay for the construction and upkeep. The residents of Watson and Dean have seen their streets disfigured with a forest of white posts. The parking problem is not solved and it would appear that no one has won. Of course, I have forgotten the towing company! — T. de Faye, 3011 Foul Bay Road.

Quaint Victoria

Recently a friend and I were refused service at the White Spot Restaurant on Government Street (sic) at approximately 9:45 on a Tuesday evening. The reason? We did not wish to share a meal sitting elbow to elbow with other couples at the side tables built for two. The hostess told us there was nothing else available and she left us.

Since over half of the four-seater booths were unoccupied and no one was sitting in the lobby waiting for space, as sometimes happens; we proceeded to a booth and were told by the waiter that he could not serve us unless we had been seated by the hostess; and he left us. As others around us (presumably seated by the hostess) showed no identifying marks like rubber stamps on their wrists, or sticky labels on their foreheads; we resumed that the policy was to restrict booths to three or more people.

What kind of ninnies would accept this kind of treatment and return for more? Surely not one in a hundred outside the protective seclusion of Victoria would continue to frequent a place with such a dehumanizing atmosphere!

Dear, quaint Victoria. How I love you; but you make the meekest lambs look like lions! — Lynne Marsh, 304-1215 Bay Street.

I feel I must write and point out to your readers that a piece of gross misinformation has been disseminated recently by the Social Credit government via a leaflet entitled Report from the Hon. Sam Bawlf, MLA. I quote directly from the front page of this sheet "Long Term Care covers both home care nursing and homemaker service at no charge ..."

This is absolutely incorrect. There is a financial assessment done as part of the intake procedure and income from all sources must be listed. From this assessment a daily rate (fee for service) is established. The last part of the application for home support service is as follows:

"I declare the above information is correct. I agree that I will pay the amount calculated per day for each day that I receive homemakers' service."

On the back of the sheet it states: "Where an individual's or a family's monthly net income exceeds the appropriate basic income level authorized for that family unit pursuant to sections 3 and 4 of this schedule, that individual or family shall pay all or a portion of the costs of family support services by paying the lesser of either

(a) the actual costs of the service, or

(b) one-half of available income after deducting the basic income level from monthly net income. — Joyce Heynsbroek, R.N., 1448 Vining Street.

Oil-killed bird on Brittany coast

NEW YORK TIMES
An Editorial

The Titanic, the Morro Castle, the Torrey Canyon — the names have come to symbolize not only great disasters at sea but also great leaps forward in maritime safety. Now we must add the Amoco Cadiz to the list. It broke up off Brittany, spilling more oil than any tanker in history. What value can we salvage from this colossal wreck?

There is no certain defence against such accidents. Indeed, accidents account for only 10 per cent of the oil dumped into the oceans. About three million tons are lost each year through the flushing of tanks, the dumping of ballast water and leakage. Still, the accidental spills are getting larger as the tankers grow in size. The largest ship, at 544,917 deadweight tons, is more than twice the size of the Amoco Cadiz. What is certain is that the oceans cannot keep absorbing these insults without lasting harm.

The fouled beaches and dying birds are not the half of it. The effects on the microorganisms at the base of the food chain are incalculable. They are particularly devastating in coastal waters, teeming with life. The Amoco Cadiz spilled her cargo into ocean nurseries at spawning time and no one knows, for example, how long it till take for the coastal shellfish to be purged of those oil compounds known to be carcinogenic.

The oceans clean themselves with remarkable vigor, but mankind should have learned by now that the old assumptions about the renewability of natural resources are dangerously wrong. Over the next generation, the oceans will have to become an increasingly important source of food protein. In polluting them we poison the farmlands of the future. If the protection of tourism, fishing and marine species is not enough to rouse us, the threat to future food supplies ought finally to rally the forces of self-defence.

For a start, Congress should pass the pending legislation to ratify a 1973 international convention that would stiffen the safety standards for oil tankers. It should also act on a pending bill to establish a $200-million compensation fund for oil-spill damage.

Few countries have so far ratified the convention on marine pollution proposed by the intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization. Action by the United States would presumably increase the pressure on other coastal nations, especially, we would hope, Liberia, Panama and others that lend a "flag of convenience" to ocean vessels without also imposing regulations of prudence.

Still more stringent safety standards have been passed by the Senate at the behest of Senator Magnuson. They would apply to all tankers using American ports, including the artificial deepwater ports now being designed. It is a highly technical bill affecting segregated ballast tanks and crude-oil washing equipment, collision-avoidance mechanisms and radar. The layman cannot judge the wisdom of every provision or of additional proposals for international tanker navigation systems. Surely, however, such measures need to be examined with some urgency.

The costs of greater safety may be considerable, but they do not begin to approach the costs of our negligence.

A Generation of Extremists

HENRY TANNER

Curcio, left, lead to Red Brigade trial last week.

Body of his wife Mara is covered after 1975 shootout.

ROME — Renato Curcio, a bearded man of 36 with a prominent nose and a deceptively placid expression, is the best known and most striking figure of the Red Brigades, the urban guerrilla group that shook the foundations of the Italian state by abducting former prime minister Aldo Moro and killing the five members of his police escort.

Curcio could have played no direct personal role in the attack; he has been in jail for over two years. His only public appearances have been in the metal cage that serves as the dock for him and 11 other defendants now standing trial in Turin. Yet by exploring his background, and the background of those who joined his movement, one can get a sense of the social and political frustrations that over the last 15 years have produced a generation of extremists in Italy, young men and women who, whether they call themselves adherents of the left or the right, have come to believe that violence is the only way to effect change.

Curcio founded the brigades 10 years ago in Milan with a handful of companions. A gifted sociology student with an equally gifted student wife, he is the product of the turbulent years of European student unrest in the late 1960s, when students in Paris occupied the Sorbonne and fought nightly street battles with the police while student radicals in Italy clashed regularly, and with increasing violence, with security forces on most campuses. The student revolution of the '60s failed to shake the established order in Western Europe. Its greatest impact was not on the "ruling class," as the students had hoped, but on the rebels themselves, who were left even more deeply frustrated and estranged.

Curcio was a student at the University of Trento, in northeastern Italy. He had chosen Trento because it was a new school with few traditions and a strong department of sociology. Roberto Ognibene, Alberto Franceschini, Prospero Gallinari and other members of the Red Brigades — most of them from solid middle-class families — also were studying at universities in northern Italy at that time.

On campus, Curcio soon became a student revolutionary, a frequent participant in endless ideological debates and an editor of a radical student review. He was known to rise at six in the morning to read Marx, Lenin, Mao Tse-tung, Che Guevara, Sartre and Henri Marcuse. He became a Communist, but found the Italian Communist Party unappealing; he took part in a futile attempt to organize a pro-Peking party. He had no taste for political violence and avoided the clashes with the police that occurred on his campus as elsewhere. He was known as a theorist, not an activist. In his review, he argued that the time for violence had not yet come. Later, however, he took his revolutionary campaign from the campus to the poorest rural areas of southern Italy. He joined protesting day laborers and was looking on when two laborers were shot dead in a clash with police. He decided then that violence was the only way to achieve his goal of replacing the "oppressive" capitalistic system with a communistic "society of free and equal men," as he put it in a letter to his mother some years later.

"Dearest Yolanda, my mother," he wrote from prison in 1974, "it has been years since the day I went out to take up my own life and left you alone to face your life. I have worked, studied, fought ... looking for my road. I found frustration, injustice, oppression. And the people who exercise (oppression). And the people who endure it. I was among the latter. And these latter were the majority. I understood then that my story was their story and my future theirs." In an interview with the Italian weekly Europeo, also from prison, Curcio added that "class warfare" by urban guerrillas had to be launched even though — or because — Western Europe was not yet ripe for a full-scale armed insurrection by the proletariat. He took violent issue with Italy's Communist Party for its aim of a "historic compromise" with the bourgeoisie. He called instead for the left to make a "historic break" with the "oppressive classes." The Red Brigades' principal short-term goal is to break up the political co-operation between the Communists and the ruling Christian Democrats. The long-term goal is to break down the existing institutions.

Politically, the appeal of the Red Brigades is directed at young Italians who, like Curcio, have turned their backs on society or feel that they were shunted aside by it — the survivors of campus unrest, the students and former students who went to hopelessly overcrowded, disintegrating universities, the young unemployed who have lost hope of ever getting a job and who resent the strong official labor unions that are primarily interested in protecting the lucky ones who do have jobs.

Even though Curcio clearly is a member of the generation that was "turned off" in the late '60s, there was nothing preordained about the course he chose. According to an authoritative book by Alessandro Silj about the origins of Italian terrorism, Curcio was an illegitimate child reared by a strong mother he adored and to whom he continues to write. His childhood was far from unhappy. At the university he fell in love with a fellow student, the daughter of a Trento merchant, and they got married — in church. Curcio had been brought up a Roman Catholic, but was no longer practising by then; his wife was a practising Catholic. The two had been brought together by student politics and Mara, his wife, later played an active role in the Red Brigades before she was killed during a shootout with police.

What emerges clearly from Silj's book is the fatal escalation of the conflict between the police and the young couple once they made the decision to use violence as the means of achieving their political goals. They were living in Milan when they were arrested for the first time in 1971. Their apartment was searched. Curcio lost the job he had taken with a prominent publishing house. They moved to another apartment and kept their new address secret even from their friends. They went underground, and soon afterward they founded the Red Brigades. By March, 1972, they broke off contact even with his mother and her parents. The first Red Brigades' operations included the bombing of empty buildings and kidnappings (with the victims quickly released unharmed) to get money for weapons — tame stuff compared with the organization's more recent brutal killings.

One of the unanswered questions now is whether Curcio, behind bars, remains the real leader of the organization he founded. Specialists believe that he retains an unchallenged personal prestige among his comrades, but that effective leadership has passed to others. It was noted that he and his fellow defendants in Turin were surprised by the news of Moro's abduction and earlier by word that a Turin police officer had been killed. Among the men believed to be commanding the Red Brigades' operations now is Gallinari, nine years younger than Curcio, who police now say was identifed by witnesses as one of Moro's kidnappers.

The System Wins Again in France

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN

Some praise the wisdom and foresight of President Giscard d'Estaing, others the matchless energy and drive of Mr. Jacques Chirac. But as the parties of the Right celebrate their handsome victory in the French elections it would be appropriate if someone were to find time to lay a reverential wreath on the tomb of Governor Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts, the original exponent of the gerrymander, whose philosophies have done much to add substance to the triumph of the outgoing majority. The coalition of the Right took just 1.3 per cent more of the vote than the parties of the Left, but won 91 more seats. If seats had been shared according to votes, Giscard and Chirac would today be celebrating a majority of about seven. To have won these elections, when all the portents indicated defeat, is certainly a ripe achievement for the Right; but let no one underestimate how much they gained from having the rules of the game, in this and other ways, tilted in their favor.

To that extent, the inquest on the Left is bound to be tempered by the knowledge that under a fair system they would have run the Right much closer than in practice they did. Even so, there are bound to be bitter recriminations and doubts about whether the old alliance can be renewed. The Socialists clearly suffered from their partnership with the Communists, both because it scared away some of their potential voters, and because it sappingly damaged their credibility to be attacked, day after day through the campaign, by the party which was supposed to be working for them.

Both Gaullists and Giscardiens are now proclaiming themselves as the allies of change, and talking of reducing the outrageous inequities which flourish in France. It would be as well if, even amid their celebrations, they could preserve a proper humility in the face of the public dissatisfaction with their record which the voting has demonstrated. It would be better still if their new-found commitment to change were not to fall short of the electoral system itself, so that it could be replaced, before France votes again, by a more truly proportional system dominated by a proper respect for the equality of all electors.

A Scene from a Marriage

By GARY LAUTENS

My wife and I don't get many chances to have lunch together at a restaurant during the week. Jackie's usually at home, and I'm at the office.

But a few days ago we decided to play hooky and rendezvous downtown at a quiet little Japanese restaurant as a special treat.

We hadn't been seated more than a minute or two, however, when the missus began to fidget and look uncomfortable.

"I feel out of place," she whispered.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because I get the feeling we're the only married couple here, at least married to each other."

At that moment the older man at the next table leaned over the cutlery to whisper something to his companion, and kiss her fingertips. She giggled.

"You've got to expect that short of thing in downtown Toronto during lunch hour," I conceded.

A middle-aged woman across the room tossed back her head and laughed uproariously at something the man with her had apparently said. It must have been a terrific joke because she slapped him on the knee, several times.

"What are we going to do?" Jackie asked. "We're sticking out like a pair of sore thumbs."

In the gloom I could see one of the diners light a cigarette and hand it to the young thing sharing his table. She put it between her lips very earnestly.

"Act as if we're not married," I advised softly. "For heaven's sake, don't discuss the kids, the leak in the basement, or how far you're behind in the ironing. Somebody will hear you for sure."

My wife nodded.

The waitress came to take our order and, to indicate I wasn't married, I ordered from the menu without asking Jacke what I would like to eat.

While I was making the selection, Jackie stretched as far as she could and blew in my ear, hoping her saucy action wouldn't go unnoticed.

My response was to suggest she might be more comfortable if she slipped out of her overcoat. She did, exposing a hint of throat above her blouse and cardigan sweater.

I like to think we carried it off beautifully during lunch.

I handed Jackie the salt and pepper, let her take first pick of the butter pads, narrowed the eyes to mere slits several times and stopped eating long enough to make what I considered a rather good animal sound in the back of my throat.

And not once did I drop food down my front and ask the missus to dunk her napkin in the drinking water and wash it off.

And give my wife full credit, too. She did not pick up the plate and look at the back of it to see where it was made, nor did she make certain the knife and fork were clean by rubbing them with the corner of the table cloth.

No, she only had eyes for me during the meal, and when dessert was served she even gave me a bit of cheesecake off her own fork without asking the usual — "Do you have a cold?"

Sad to say, we didn't quite make it to the very end, though.

When the bill came, I couldn't read it because I didn't have my glasses with me, and you don't get much light from one crummy candle.

There seemed to be a hush in the room just as I handed the bill to my wife and asked, "What does it say, and how much tip should we leave?"

"I think we just blew our singles image," she responded.

Alberni Radio Station's Erased Tapes Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) The federal regulatory agency for broadcasting says it views with serious concern allegations that radio station CJAV in Port Alberni deliberately erased portions of a broadcast tape said to have contained contentious statements by a local alderman whose name was not released.

In a recent decision, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) said it is particularly concerned because CJAV's general manager is also an alderman of the community.

"This position . . . can easily create the potential for misunderstanding and possible conflict, especially in such sensitive aras as local news and public affairs," the CRTC said about the general manager.

In renewing the station's broadcasting licence for two years instead of the usual five, the CRTC said the station must take steps during the next six months to eradicate the commission's concerns.

It also reminded the station for the second time in two years about its legal obligation to provide a reasonably balanced forum for differing opinions about public issues.

At public hearings into CJAV's licence renewal, Petronella Nalleweg told the CRTC that a portion of a broadcast tape of a civic all-candidates election meeting Nov. 17, 1977, had been erased.

Mrs. Nalleweg alleged that the portion of the tape contained contentious statements made by an alderman at the meeting and that the section of the tape had been deliberately erased.

CJAV denied that accusation and "claimed that the omission had been due to technical errors," the CRTC said.

By law, radio stations must keep tapes of all programs for four weeks after they have been aired.

But since Mrs. Nalleweg's request for the tape about the all-candidates meeting had missed the deadline, the CRTC said it had no basis for establishing a violation of those broadcasting regulations.

Nevertheless, the CRTC said it views the matter with serious concern.

A CRTC spokesman said CJAV will be expected to make sure there are no further missing portions of broadcast tapes.

As well, CJAV will be expected to take steps to ensure that differing opinions are expressed about public issues, the spokesman said.

Veitch Won't Step Down

Burnaby-Willingdon Socred MLA Elwood Veitch said Monday he has no intention of resigning his position as chairman of the legislature's committee on Crown corporations.

Veitch made the statement in reaction to a call by Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) for Veitch to step down because he hired two of his former campaign workers as $30-an-hour consultants for the committee.

Levi said Monday he tabled a motion in the legislature on Friday asking the house to recommend to the committee that Veitch not be re-appointed as chairman.

The motion won't be called until today at the earliest, Levi said.

The controversy involves Norman Kelsey, a former Lower Mainland director of the Social Credit party, and Lorne Fingarson, a former campaign worker for the party.

$21M FOR YOUTH

The British Columbia government has increased the budget of its Youth Employment Program by $5 million to raise the total to $21 million, program director Vern Burkhardt said Monday.

Burkhardt said that although the new total still represents a decrease of $1 million compared with last year, the program hopes to employ about 17,000 students — 2,000 more than in 1977.

He said the additional money means there will not be a cutback to universities, colleges and institutes this summer as earlier feared, but there will be a small cutback to provincial ministries and non-profit organizations.

He said most of the new funds will go to the private sector to meet its requests for about $6 million. Last year, Burkhardt noted, the private sector requested only $2.5 million.

Prince George Favored

Studies never released by the provincial government show Prince George was favored as the site for a Japanese steel mill despite major social, medical and cultural drawbacks.

The studies, undertaken during the former New Democratic Party administration, only reached the second of three phases before Japanese interests pulled out in 1976, citing poor markets and high labor costs.

The studies were obtained with the help of Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre), former provincial economic development minister. Although the three studies would have cost more than $1.2 million and there was a recommendation to have them released, the government has kept the reports secret.

The reports, written in 1975, show that any steel mill built would have major negative effects on Prince George or on Kitimat, the other community considered as a mill site.

Negative impacts cited were heavy pressure on outdoor recreation, social services and educational facilities, and possible loss of rural lifestyles.

The reports recommended a "smaller scale, diversified industrial development" instead of the large steel mill that was being considered by the provincial NDP government and the Japanese firm of Nippon Kokan Kaisha.

Positive effects listed in the reports include more money for the community, chance for expansion of secondary industry and cultural and post-secondary educational development.

Prince George was favored over Kitimat because its larger population could more easily handle the influx of new residents.

Non-Confidence Easily Defeated

The Socred government easily survived the first non-confidence motion of the new legislative session by a vote of 33 to 19 Monday night.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Conservative leader Vic Stephens voted with the NDP in the traditional opposition no-confidence vote.

It was Stephens' first vote, the Oak Bay MLA having been sworn in to office earlier in the day.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said political patronage is Social Credit's answer to unemployment rather than programs to create jobs. There are 109,000 jobless — 27,000 more than when Social Credit took power 27 months ago.

Barrett said bankruptcies almost doubled to 408 last year and mortgage foreclosures have increased dramatically.

The government, he said, has abolished modest patronage and made it blatant, open, come-and-get-it patronage.

"That's their approach to solving unemployment."

Gibson, in his reply to the throne speech, outlined a multi-point program.

He called on the attorney-general to set up a crime commission to deal with commercial fraud, and for a committee on statutes instruments which would inform the MLAs whether the government and the bureaucracy exceeded powers accorded them under various laws.

"We have no way of knowing if orders-in-council are legally and properly done, and are within the power accorded to the cabinet."

Gibson also asked that the government initiate an experimental program to broadcast legislature proceedings. He said he would prefer television but would settle for radio coverage at first.

The Liberal leader called on Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm to implement the Social Credit campaign promise of indexing Mincome payments to increases in living costs and called for expanded disclosure laws to force companies to provide more information to shareholders.

He reminded Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf of his promise to ban leg-hold traps, and called on the government to do something about the costs of transit, saying that Hydro bus costs currently are 80 cents a passenger mile which he said is the same cost as that for taxis.

The Liberal leader asked the forest ministry to institute an economic inquiry to permit labor and management to better understand the costs of the industry; and for the opening of timber licences to permit the harvesting of overmature timber "rotting on the stump."

Gibson requested establishment of a dental health program for children, opposed the compulsory aspect of the government's proposed heroin treatment program and suggested B.C. Hydro electricity rates be regulated by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Oyster Growing Grants Offered

Oyster farmers in British Columbia now will be eligible for low-interest government loans and tax considerations, Sam Bawlf, recreation and conservation minister, said Monday.

Bawlf said in a news release the government has established an $85,000 development program providing loans and grants for oyster farmers.

In addition, he said, oyster farmers who suffered costly setbacks because of the 1976 seed oyster failure in Pendrell Sound will receive partial compensation from the provincial government.

Present oyster production in B.C. averages 80,000 to 85,000 gallons a year, with a wholesale value of more than $1 million, Bawlf said.

BCR Report Near

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday the interim report of the royal commission examining the B.C. Railway will soon be tabled in the legislature.

Bennett said in answer to a question from Bill King (NDP—Revelstoke-Slocan) that the government will meet the requirement to table the report within 10 sitting days from beginning of the current session of the legislature. The house began its session on Thursday.

The interim report of the royal commission deals with the Fort Nelson line of Crown-owned railway.

RECORD SET IN NEW FIRMS

A record 13,209 companies were incorporated last year compared to a previous high of 12,355 in 1976, Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Monday.

Mair said in a news release also that a record 745 companies incorporated in other jurisdictions were registered compared to 657 the previous year.

In addition, the minister said, 72 continuances, in which a company moves the place of its incorporation to a new jurisdiction, were registered last year.

Other statistics disclosed by Mair show the number of societies registered in the province last year increased by a total of 78 to a high of 850. The number of partnerships registered last year was 2,622, an increase of 132 compared with the previous year.

A slight decrease was recorded in the number of registrations of co-operatives, which fell to 20 from the previous year's total of 38.

Economy Advancing - Bank

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada's Trendicator, an index of 11 leading indicators designed to signal in advance the direction of future Canadian economic activity, pushed ahead strongly in the fourth quarter to reach its highest level in more than three-and-a-half years.

Calculated on the basis of new national accounts data, the Trendicator increased at an annual rate of 2.4 per cent during the final quarter of 1977. At year's end the index stood at 103.18, the highest level recorded since the first quarter of 1974.

"This increase in Trendicator is welcome news," said Dr. Robert Baguley, senior economist with the Royal Bank, "particularly since it follows a increase in the third quarter of last year."

Trendicator rose in three quarters of 1977 and declined in one, reversing the 1976 pattern. But Baguley said it won't be clear whether or not the economy is beginning a sustained upward trend until data for the first quarter of 1978 become available.

In an earlier report released in February, The Royal Bank had estimated no change in the level of Trendicator between the third and fourth quarters of 1977.

However, the bank notes that estimate was based upon actual data for only five of the eleven componenets of Trendicator.

In addition, it notes, "price inflation turned out to be lower than expected, with a resultant salutary effect on some of the components." Some of the the data series was also revised upward, which raised the level of the index, it said.

According to the new data for the 1977 final quarter, 10 of the 11 Trendicator components increased. Both the liabilities of business failures and the number of residential building permits issued increased at above-average rates from their third quarter levels while eight other components showed below-average increases. Only the price-earnings ratio of the Toronto Stock Exchange declined.

The Royal Bank's report said the Trendicator's upward movement supports the view that economic activity in Canada should pick up moderately in the second half of 1978.

Whitehorse

Whitehorse Copper Mines Ltd. has announced net earnings for 1977 of $102,647 or three cents a share, compared with $435,044 or 13 cents a share in 1976.

The company said in a news release that 1976 earnings after an extraordinary item were $488,044 or 16 cents a share.

Whitehorse said the decrease in earnings was due to a change in the concentrate sales contract establishing the point of sale as the time of final settlement rather than the time of loading at the mine, which made earnings relate to realized prices, rather than estimates.

Seaboard

Seaboard Life Insurance Co. has announced net earnings for 1977 of $1.62 million or $3.01 a share, down from $1.76 million or $3.26 a share in 1976.

Company president J. M. Burnett said the decrease in earnings was due to provisions made for a substantial income tax liability.

Burnett said the company "used up the balance of what amounted to a loss carry forward for income tax purposes so that for the years ahead its profits will be fully exposed to corporate income tax."

Seaboard Life is controlled by Allarco Developments of Edmonton.

Western

Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. has reported net earnings for the six-month period ending Feb. 28 of $2,610,180 or 70 cents a share, compared with $2,214,064 or 58.5 cents a share in the same period of 1977.

Gross revenues for the period were $14,496,534 compared to $14,264,955 in the previous year.

President J. R. Peters also reported that extraordinary gains amounted to $77,327, compared to $58,680 last year.

As well as its radio and television interests, Western Broadcasting holds majority interest in Northwest Sports Enterprises, operators of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League.

Peters reported that earnings from television and radio interests were up from last year while earnings from hockey interests were down.

Among Western's broadcast holdings are radio stations CKNW in New Westminster, CJOB in Winnipeg, CHQR in Calgary and CHML in Hamilton. The company also has holdings in British Columbia Television Broadcasting System Ltd. which operates TV stations here and at Victoria.

Simpsons-Sears

Simpsons-Sears Ltd. had profits in 1977 of $44,926,000 or 60 cents a share compared with $33,174,000 or 44 cents a share in 1976.

The 1977 earnings included about $5,600,000 from an inventory allowance for tax purposes.

Sales increased 10.7 per cent.

J. C. Barrow, chairman, said the company expects 1978 will be a "year of further improvement."

Last year, the company opened three new department stores and 102 catelogue sales offices.

Finning

Finning Tractor and Equipment Co. Ltd. has reported that its profits climbed to $12,002,000, or $3.02 a share, in 1977, from $8,609,000, or $2.17 a share, in 1976.

Revenues rose to $246,761,000 from $199,795,000.

In the fourth quarter of last year, net income was $4,245,000 on revenue of $65,565,000 compared with $3,171,000 on revenue of $59,966,000 in the same period of 1976.

The improved results were attributed to a good B.C. lumber market, more heavy construction activity and the application of the federal investment tax credit on equipment rented to customers.

Alberta Energy

Alberta Energy Co. (AEC) net earnings of 98 cents a share were up 76 per cent in 1977 from 1976, the company said in its annual report.

David E. Mitchell, AEC president, said 1977, the third year of operation for the company, was "a year of considerable progress and appreciable growth in prefse for shareholders."

"Net earnings were $4 million in 1975, $8.5 million in 1976, and $14.9 million in 1977," Mitchell said.

AEC's cash flow in 1977 was $17.1 million, more than double the 1976 amount.

$1Million Fund Proposed For Junior Development

VANCOUVER (CP) — The outgoing president of the Western Canada Hockey League said Monday he would like to see the 34 teams belonging to the Canadian Major Junior Hockey League get a $1-million operating fund each season from the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association.

Ed Chynoweth told a news conference that the $1-million pool "would give all teams a chance to operate on sound financial ground."

"You would give each team about $15,000 to start with," said Chynoweth, "then make incentive payments to the teams which produced the top pro drafts."

Chynoweth made his proposal after noting that NHL and WHA teams still owe CMJHL teams "hundreds of thousands of dollars in development fees."

He said he met recently with NHL president John Ziegler to discuss the overdue payments and was optimistic that the CMJHL was closer to agreement with the pro leagues than ever before.

"Major junior operators desperately need these development fees to continue operation," said Chynoweth, who three months ago announced he would resign as WCHL president on June 15 after heading the league for 5½ years.

The CMJHL has tnree member leagues—the WCHL, the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League and the Quebec Junior Hockey League.

"Take the New Westminster Bruins, for example," Chynoweth said. "NHL teams owe the Bruins over $175,000 in development fees."

The Bruins have had five graduating players selected in the first round of the NHL amateur draft in recent years, including Barry Beck by Colorado Rockies and Brad Maxwell by Minnesota North Stars in 1977.

Bill Shinske, general manager of the Bruins, said New Westminster has received $12,000 so far from Minnesota for Maxwell, but only $7,000 from Colorado for Beck.

The new agreement between the NHL and CMJHL which began this season calls for $1,000 when a player is drafted, $6,000 when a first-round draft choice signs and $5,000 for every 40 games played in the NHL, with the total package not exceeding $20,000.

Shinske said NHL teams are far behind in payments for players taken in previous years under another formula, including Cleveland Barons for the drafting of Richard Shinske, his son, in 1975 when the team played out of Oakland as the Seals.

The WCHL announced that league attendance passed the one million mark for the first time in five seasons in 1977-78, with 1,059,712 fans attending home games of the 12 league teams.

Three teams—Portland Winter Hawks, Lethbridge Broncos and Brandon Wheat Kings—drew more than 100,000 fans for 36 home games. Portland led with 138,712 fans for an average of 3,853 a game.

Flin Flon Bombers attracted the fewest fans, averaging 1,091 a game.

UNION OF UNIONS FORMED BY PROS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sports unions in six professional leagues, including the Canadian Football League, have formally banded together to form Professional Athletes International, it was announced Monday.

Representatives of the six unions, representing some 2,800 athletes, adopted a constitution during a six-hour meeting here Sunday. They named Ed Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players' Association, as PAI's staff director and Doug Strong of the CFL Players' Association as secretary-treasurer.

In addition to the NFLPA and the CFLPA, other affiliated associations are from the World Hockey Association, North American Soccer League, Association of Tennis Professionals and Professional Riders, representing motorcycle racers.

The players' unions of the National Hockey League and National Basketball Association are not interested in joining, but the Ladies Professional Golf Association and Women's Tennis Association have expressed support for the new umbrella organization, said Garvey.

Garvey also said the Major League Baseball player representatives may consider membership when they meet July 11 during the all-star break.

Initially, the PAI will be financed by an initiation fee of $10 a member. Each organization will have one vote, regardless of size, on the PAI executive council. Each union will be represented on the council by two members.

Asked to name the kind of services PAI will be able to provide, Garvey said, as an example, the new organization can negotiate with insurance companies on behalf of some 3,000 persons rather than on an individual basis or for just one union.

He also said PAI headquarters, to be located in Washington, can establish a career development centre for all pro athletes as opposed to doing it for an individual group.

Okay, Here They Are: Baseball's Best in '78

Whether you believe in the Cougars or not — and what's a body to think after Saturday night's surprising result in Portland where the Cougars dragged the division champion Winter Hawks down to their level in the Western Canada Hockey League post-season playoffs? — it's spring, baseball definitely is in the air and Seattle Mariners' manager Darrell Johnson must rank as the most honest of all major league pilots.

Johnson, who was once top man with the Boston Red Sox when they were winning it all, last week was quoted in a Seattle paper as saying that to be realistic he figured the Mariners would finish just about in the same position as they did last year. This was one step out of the Western Division cellar and one jump ahead of the Oakland A's. Which wasn't bad for the first trip around for the Mariners and maybe better than had been hoped for.

But now, as Johnson says: "We know what we have and what we have to do and I think most of our fans understand the growth problems associated with any expansion franchise."

Johnson added that if the Mariners were to enjoy more success than anticipated, then some of the younger players would have to suddenly become mature. He remembers that season in Boston in 1975 when rookies Fred Lynn and Jim Rice played so well and, were not only the talk of the town, they were the talk of the baseball world. So it can happen.

The big key to the Mariners of course is an improvement in the pitching staff which last year gave up the highest earned-run average in the American League (4.83) and only had 18 complete games. Johnson's plan is to give his youngsters a chance and, if even one or two comes through, then he feels this would be an accomplishment.

So the Mariners aren't about to win the West, even if they do achieve 75 to 80 victories, which is Johnson's optimistic forecast. No, that lot will fall to either the defending-champion Kansas City Royals, it says here, with the Texas Rangers and California Angels the possible upsetters. The Royals won more games than any other major league club last season and haven't lost anything; and they weren't far from knocking off the New York Yankees in the AL final series either.

★ ★ ★

Texas has strengthened, most notably with the addition of free agents Richie Zisk and George Medich. The Angels have a big plus in Lyman Bostock who draws one of the biggest salaries in baseball. Incidentally, Bostock's take-home pay, all benefits considered, is reported as $450,000. This isn't the highest in baseball, but it's only topped by three others, Larry Hisle of Milwaukee ($525,833), Oscar Gamble of San Diego ($475,000) and Rich Gossage of the New York Yankees ($458,000). Yep, Gossage gets more than Reggie Jackson even.

And, as for the Yanks, they are looking to Gossage to take up some of the slack from the loss of pitcher Mike Torrez, a two-game winner in the World Series, to Boston Red Sox. The Yanks have also come up with another good reliefer in Rawley Eastwick.

The main challenge should come from Boston which wasn't that far away (two and one-half games) last year, and definitely has strengthened. Baltimore, which put up a strong fight, may find the going tougher this time, while Milwaukee has been beefed up in the off-season, especially through Hisle, and could make a run for the top.

★ ★ ★

In the National League East, things don't appear to have changed much. Philadelphia Phillies have been divisional champions for three straight years now and don't seem likely to tail off. The Phils have a well-balanced club and won handily in '77. Chicago Cubs, who pulled the early-season shocker last year, just could do it again. At least they have a new slugger in Dave Kingman who, if right — and the Cubs are paying him $275,000 to find out — could provide that extra power they lacked before.

The Montreal Expos have added pitcher Ross Grimsley who should help, but will it be enough? Not likely, even though this could be the tightest of all divisional races. And if Philly falters . . well, who knows?

Which brings up the annual toughie — Los Angeles or Cincinnati in the West?

The Dodgers got off winging last season and nobody was going to catch them after that. But the Reds didn't have Tom Seaver at the start and their pitching staff wasn't that great. The Dodgers and Reds must rate one, two, in whatever order with the pick here the Reds to snap back and win the pennant in a squeaker. Following behind the Dodgers will most likely be Houston.

Meanwhile, all the rest will be hoping for the surprises that more often than not pop up somewhere, and often in the most unexpected places.

Like, for a long shot, maybe Texas in the American League West.

Okay, so it's your turn.

MARINERS IN FINAL

Mariners clipped Oak Bay 2-1 Monday at Windsor Park in a special tie-breaker match to advance to the play-off final of the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association.

The two teams played to a 1-1 deadlock in their semi-final Saturday to force the extra game.

Jenny John scored both goals for Mariners and Denise Hall replied for Oak Bay.

Mariners will face UVic Vikettes in the final at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Windsor Park.

McKenzie Feels Age No Barrier

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Johnny McKenzie, a 40-year-old right winger who began his major-league hockey career 20 years ago, says he still has nights when he feels young again.

Monday night was one of those nights and McKenzie scored three goals to lead New England Whalers to an 8-6 win over Houston Aeros in the only scheduled World Hockey Association game.

"Our line's getting good, and I feel young again," said McKenzie who ran his season total to 27 goals. Centre Dave Keon set up two McKenzie goals and left winger Mark Howe set up the other and scored twice to run his own goal total to 26.

The win put New England six points ahead of Houston in the battle for second place in the WHA. The Whalers, with four games to play, can wrap up second place Wednesday night in Edmonton.

"Second place is not gone; it's up to New England to give it up," said Aeros coach Bill Dineen.

Whalers coach Harry Neale said New England turned things around when they stopped taking "stupid" penalties.

His team drew eight minors over the first two periods and only one in the final.

New England broke on top, 3-0, as McKenzie scored two of his goals and George Lyle accounted for a third before the game was eight minutes old.

A wild shootout ensued, as the Aeros rallied to a 5-5 tie at 1:58 of the final period. But New England regrouped, scoring three in quick succession, to wrap up their third straight victory.

In Houston, meanwhile, the Aeros' office announced Monday a news conference will be held today and there was speculation clubs officials will discuss their expected bid for a National Hockey League franchise.

Kenneth Schnitzer, chairman of the board, also is expected to ask Houston fans to purchase a record number of season tickets for next year to show support for his attempts to get the team into the NHL.

Aeros home attendance is down this year from last year when 4,800 season tickets were sold. The team sold 3,250 season tickets this year and has drawn 283,840 in 39 games compared to 350,380 for the same number of games last season.

Islanders, Flyers In Last-Week Race

MONTREAL (CP) — With one week remaining in the National Hockey League's 1977-78 regular-season schedule, there are still positions to be decided including the all-important Patrick Division race between New York Islanders and Philadelphia Flyers.

The Patrick Division race is important because the winner will also emerge as the Clarence Campbell Conference champion.

The Islanders have 106 points after 77 games compared with 101 for Philadelphia after 76 games.

Chicago Black Hawks, winners of the Smythe Division and also eligible for the Campbell Conference title, are well behind the pace of the Islanders with 80 points.

The team which wins the Patrick Division and the Campbell Conference will earn $5,000 per man as each title is worth $2,500 per player.

Montreal Canadiens won the Norris Division and the Prince of Wales Conference title some time ago and Boston Bruins captured the Adams Division ahead of Buffalo Sabres last week.

In the race for the final wild-card playoff spot, New York Rangers need only one point in their final four games to qualify. The Rangers have 71 points while Pittsburgh Penguins had 64 points and four games remaining.

In the event of a complete Ranger collapse, a single loss by the Penguins would give the Rangers the wild-card berth.

Colorado Rockies and Vancouver Canucks are battling for the other playoff spot which goes to the second-place finisher from the Smythe Division.

Each team has three games to play and the Rockies have a two-point lead over the Canucks. If both teams finish with the same number of points, the tie would first be broken by the team with the most victories.

If both have the same number of victories, then Colorado would advance on the basis of the season series between the two. Colorado had three victories and three ties against the Canucks this season.

Vancouver has 19 victories compared with 18 for Colorado, but the Canucks also lead in losses with 42 compared with 39 for the Rockies.

On an individual level, Mike Bossy of the Islanders became the first rookie and the second-youngest player in NHL history to record 50 goals when he hit the mark for his 50th and 51st of the season against Washington Capitals on Saturday.

KAZANOWSKI TRIO TO ATTEND UVIC

NANAIMO — The three Kazanowski brothers, outstanding performers for Nanaimo Islanders in the recent British Columbia high school boys' basketball championships, have decided to attend the University of Victoria this fall.

Parents of the boys said Monday the three decided to attend UVic because the move would enable them to play together.

Gerald, 17, was voted the most-valuable player in the B.C. tournament, in which the Islanders defeated Oak Bay Bays. Greg and John, both 19, were named tournament all-stars.

Athletics Rally To Tie Series

Victoria Athletics rallied with five goals in the third period Monday night to trip Esquimalt Maple Leafs 7-4 at Memorial Arena and force a deciding game in the best-of-seven South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff final.

Ed Beauchemin sparked Athletics with two goals and singles were contributed by Bruce Cowick, Dan Peck, Gord Neilson, John Entzminger and Dale Ewasiuk.

Gerry Blanchette and Dale Cook replied for league-champion Leafs, who led 3-2 after the second period.

The deciding game is scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday at Memorial Arena.

Denver Tops Midwest Loop

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Denver Nuggets clinched the regular season championship of the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division on Monday night as Dan Issel's 27-point performance led them to a 104-95 win over Buffalo Braves in the only game scheduled.

The Nuggets wiped out a 10-point, second-half deficit en route to the victory which moved them four games ahead of second-place Milwaukee Bucks with only four games left to play.

It was the ninth loss in a row for Buffalo.

Eighty Stitches

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia centre Rick MacLeish will not play Tuesday when the Flyers meet New York Islanders in National Hockey League action because of continuing pain from two skate gashes he received in the neck.

MacLeish received a total of 80 stiches after he was cut by the skate of Los Angeles centre Marcel Dionne in a NHL game Saturday night against the Kings in Los Angeles. MacLeish received two cuts, one an inch long, the other three inches long.

Cougar Coach Wants Heroics On Home Ice

Some of Victoria Cougars' greatest moments in this Western Canada Hockey League season have come on the road. Coach Jack Shupe would be "a happy fella" if the team manages some home-ice heroics this week.

Consider some of the things the Victoria fans have missed this season:

●Fourth and last in the Western Division when they headed for the Prairies for their last big road trip, a nine-game jaunt, the Cougars pulled together impressively and returned with an eye-popping, 7-1-1, won-tied-lost record.

●To Seattle for the next-to-last game of the regular season. They had to win to retain any hope of playoff action. A Seattle victory would have meant summer's early arrival. Nothing could be plainer and the Cougars responded with sparkling 6-2 victory.

●Now the playoffs. After losing the first three games in the eight-game, round-robin semi-final series, Cougars went to Portland on Saturday with the knowledge that a loss to the Winter Hawks would have virtually eliminated Victoria. Cougars won, 6-3.

Having played three of their first four games on the road, Cougars should reap any advantages home ice has to offer when they play three of their remaining four games at Memorial Arena.

Cougars' home stand starts tonight. Against Portland, which can match Victoria's 1-3 record but has only one home date remaining.

A sweep of tonight's game and Thursday's rematch would, for all intent and purpose, wrap up a playoff berth. A double loss would be disastrous — for either Portland or Victoria.

A split will prolong the issue.

CANADA LOSES TO ARGENTINA

BAHIA BLANCA, Argentina (AP) — Argentina defeated Canada 64-50 Monday night in a Pan-American basketball tournament after leading 32-16 at halftime.

The loss was Canada's first in the Cristobal Colon Cup tournament following weekend victories over the Dominican Republic and Mexico.

The two A Group teams now advance to the final round which opens Wednesday in Buenos Aires. The Dominican Republic and Mexico will play in the consolation round.

The Canadians lost high-scoring centre Jim Zoet early in Monday's game when he was kicked or punched in the back of his left leg. Coach Jack Donohue said it was not known whether Zoet, from Port Perry, Ont., will be able to play Wednesday.

. Of the game, Donohue said: "It was a team effort. Everyone stunk. We also played a pretty good team.

"They caught us in a situation I have been worried about since we came down here. They took away some of the things we wanted to do and we are not a mature enough group to make adjustments when our basic offence was taken away from us.

"Still, I'm glad it happened tonight and not before. We have already achieved our goal which was to qualify for next year's Intercontinental Cup, and we've made the final."

Canada's leading scorer Monday night was guard Peter Ryan of Montreal with 12 points.

City Rink Splits First Two Draws

EDMONTON (CP) — Southern Ontario, Saskatchewan and Manitoba were tied with 2-0 records after the opening rounds Monday in the Canadian Firefighters Curling Championships.

Ontario's Ed Werenich and Saskatchewan's Erich Mintzner both won two lopsided games in the first day of play while Manitoba's Ernie Kovacs also won two, including a 7-6, 12-end thriller against defending two-time champion Howie Brazeau from the Northwest Territories.

In the first draw, the Territories were upset by Quebec 9-8.

In the Manitoba-Territories game, Manitoba took a 3-1 lead after five and lengthened it to 6-3 after eight before Brazeau caught up, getting two in the ninth and stealing a single in the 10th as Kovacs was heavy on his final rock.

Kovacs, from Winnipeg, had a chance to win in the 11th with an open house but was heavy.

In the 12th, Kovacs scored the single after Brazeau put his final rock to the back of the circle.

British Columbia's representative from Victoria, Dick Austin, stole four in the second end and went on to give Quebec's Brian Ness their first loss 11-5.

Austin, down 6-1 after four ends, lost to Ontario, 12-3, in the first draw.

Breeding Farms Quarantined

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Movement of thoroughbred horses from Kentucky has been banned under a quarantine order issued Monday, the federal agriculture department announced.

The quarantine was placed by the department's animal and plant wealth inspection service because of the prevalence of contagious equine metritis (CEM), a venereal disease of horses.

Dr. P. A. Chaloux, the department's deputy administrator for veterinary services, said it was unfortunate the quarantine had to be imposed during the spring breeding season, but the action was necessary to protect the horse industry.

The department said about 400 horses have been moved from the identified 14 Kentucky breeding farms to 200 other farms and are considered exposed to the disease.

The bacterial disease affects breeding efficiency. Mares fail to conceive or abort. Stallions carry the disease and can be treated successfully, but no sure cure for mares is available.

Both Kentucky state agriculture commissioner Tom Harris and the agriculture department asked for permission to use artificial insemination during the current crisis from The Jockey Club in New York. But this was rejected by the Jockey Club.

The department's quarantine order allows movement of horses for breeding purposes only if they are bred by artificial insemination under the supervision of state or federal officials.

Also exempt from the quarantine are horses moved for racing or exhibition under specified conditions and geldings and horses under 731 days of age.

U.S. Decides to Keep Merchandise Ruling

Walked into a sizzling argument the other day. Chap A insisted that U.S. Golf Association rules allow an amateur to claim up to $350 in cash without jeopardizing his simon-pure status. Other Guy didn't believe it.

The USGA had intended to amend its Rules of Amateur Status to allow golfers, in 1978, to accept cash prizes up to $350.

However, the USGA rescinded the proposal at its annual meeting in San Francisco on Jan. 28. The USGA reafffirmed the rule that prizes "must be in merchandise, must not have a retailed value exceeding $350 and must not be of a nature which is the equivalent of money or makes it readily convertible into money."

The Professional Golfers' Association strongly opposed the liberalization of the amateur status rule, fearing the change, announced late in 1977, would have had a significant effect on the game and the distinction between the amateur and the pro. The fundamental element of the distinction is that playing for money is a professional activity.

Chap A was closer to the truth than Other Guy suspected but missed the rescinding announcement.

National, provincial and local golf executives interested in juniors are always looking for a more effective development program. The interested executives would do well to check the junior programs in the Gulf States Section of the U.S.

The Gulf States have provided the U.S. with three of its top juniors during the past two years. Randy Watkins, 1977 PGA junior champ, is from Jackson, Miss. Willie Wood, last year's USGA junior champ, developed his game in Lake Charles, La. Scott Myers, 1976 Future Masters winner, is from Monroe, La.

Something or somebody is doing the job in the Gulf States.

Finding the right road hasn't been easy for the development-minded. For one thing, some executives feel development funds should be directed at the masses rather than a handful of promising hotshots. Others prefer to see attention concentrated on the hotshots.

Both hotshots and the masses should be included, and not one ignored at the expense of the other.

The answer is out there, perhaps in the Gulf States.

Yanks Only Odds-On Pick

By The Associated Press

New York Yankees, the reigning World Series champions, are odds-on favorites to win baseball's American League title again this season, according to Harrah's Reno-Tahoe Racebook.

In the National League, the oddsmakers made Cincinnati Reds and defending champion Los Angeles Dodgers co-favorites, both at 7 to 5.

The Yankees are 5-to-7 choices in the American League, followed by Kansas City Royals and Texas Rangers, both 7 to 2. Odds on other teams in the league are:

Boston Red Sox, 4 to 1; California Angels, 6 to 1, Baltimore Orioles, 15 to 1, Chicago White Sox, 60 to 1, Minnesota Twins and Detroit Tigers, each 75 to 1; Milwaukee Brewers, 100 to 1; Cleveland Indians and Oakland A's, each 300 to 1, and Seattle Mariners and Toronto Blue Jays, each 1,000 to 1.

Other National League odds are: Philadelphia Phillies, 2 to 1; Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 1; St. Louis Cardinals, 12 to 1, San Francisco Giants, 20 to 1, Houston Astros, 30 to 1; San Diego Padres, 75 to 1; Chicago Cubs and Montreal Expos, each 100 to 1, New York Mets, 200 to 1, and Atlanta Braves, 300 to 1.

Seattle Mariners open the American League season against Minnesota Twins at the Kingdome, Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Dennis Eckersley wasn't overjoyed with his first outing in a Boston uniform. The Red Sox, however, were thrilled, and Cleveland Indians were more than happy with Rick Wise as the pre-season schedule of exhibition games drew to a close.

Eckersley and Wise were involved in last week's six-player trade between Boston and Cleveland and both right-handers made impressive pitching debuts with their new clubs Monday.

Eckersley, who was acquired to help Boston overtake the world champion New York Yankees in the American League East, had to settle for New York Mets this time. He allowed three hits in five innings as the Red Sox won 6-0, while Wise held Chicago Cubs scoreless for six innings and then needed relief in the seventh of the Indians' 4-3 exhibition victory.

"I threw too many pitches, going to 2-2 counts too many times," Eckersley said. "I'm a little tired, but I guess that's only natural.

Wise allowed the Cubs four hits and retired 12 consecutive batters over one stretch.

Elsewhere, Wayne Garrett's sixth-inning home run off Philadelphia's Larry Christenson helped Montreal Expos edge Phillies 5-4 and winning pitcher Jerry Reuss delivered a run with a suicide squeeze bunt as Pittsburgh Pirates nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 6-5.

John Montefusco checked Los Angeles on two hits over the first six innings and 40-year-old Willie McCovey hit his first home run of the spring to lead San Francisco Giants to a 2-0 victory over the Dodgers, who have lost six in a row.

Home runs by Rick Dempsey and Lee May led Baltimore Orioles over New York Yankees 3-2.

Kansas City's Tom Poquette raised his spring batting average to .447 with a triple, two singles and four RBIs while Al Cowens had four singles and a pair of RBIs in a 5-4 Royals win over Chicago White Sox.

Regina Skater Retains Crown

TORONTO (CP) — Brenda Webster, the world intermediate indoor champion from Regina, as expected, won the women's intermediate title at the North American indoor speed skating championships Sunday.

Cathy Turnbull, also of Saskatchewan, won the senior women's title.

The men's senior title was taken by Scott Debres of Champagne, Ill., in an upset over 1976 world indoor champion Allan Rattray of Los Angeles.

Canada's chances in the men's senior division ended Saturday when Gaetan Boucher of Ste. Foy, Que., crashed into the boards during the 1,000-metre race and suffered knee and arm injuries.

Boucher who won both the North American and world indoor titles last year, watched Sunday's competition on crutches.

Quebec's Benoit Lamarche and Natalie Crevier won the men's and women's midget titles respectively. The juvenile titles went to Bob Kuspa and Sarah Docter, both of Wisconsin.

Nick Thometz of Minnesota won the junior men's title with Deanne Prather of Illinois taking the women's title.

Webster, Turnbull, Sandra Daigle and Lucie Gagnon, both of Quebec, are on the Canadian team that will compete next weekend in Britain at the world indoor championships.

The makeup of Canada's men's team is uncertain due to Boucher's injuries.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 43-year-old man who went on a binge and flew from Victoria to London and back with the help of a bad cheque was jailed 75 days by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Monday.

Guilty pleas to six counts of false pretences and four counts of breach of probation were entered by lawyer William McCallum on behalf of John Johnston.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court the false pretences charges were in connection with cheques written last month amounting to $859.46 for which there was not sufficient funds in his bank account. The breach charges were laid after Johnston failed to live up to four conditions in a probation order handed out in 1973 after a conviction for welfare fraud, Lang said.

Lang said the bad cheques were written to Air Canada on March 6 for $554 for a round trip ticket from Victoria to London, Crockett and Jones (Canada) Ltd. on March 8 for $28.96 boots, Woolco on March 16 for $11.10, and K-Mart on March 25 for $15.01.

McCallum told Judge Ostler his client had a long history of alcoholism and frequently went on binges. He said Johnston was on one of these binges when he bought the airline tickets and wound up in London before realizing what he had done and came back immediately on the next available flight.

Remarking that it was "a case of another man with some ability and promise having his life ruined by alcohol," Ostler handed down the sentence noting that Johnston had already spent 15 days in custody awaiting disposition of the charges and placed him on one year's probation.

★ ★ ★

"Any filthy-minded coward can hide behind a telephone line," Ostler told a 17-year-old before giving him a suspended sentence, six months probation and 100 hours of community service work.

Thomas Allan Smart, 1241 Acton, pleaded guilty to making obscene phone calls and Lang said the calls were made between Nov. 14 of last year and Feb. 12 to Colleen Joan Pettinger. Lang said police were notified Feb. 13 and a tracer was installed on the complainant's phone. He also stated that Smart began by not saying anything but used obscene language in subsequent calls.

★ ★ ★

Donald Harry Schultz, 39, of 6926 Puckle, was committed by Judge Blake Allan for higher court trial on charges of having sex with a female between 14 and 16 years of age and of previously chaste character, and killing her year-old Highland bull.

Crown counsel Don Laughton entered a stay of proceedings on a charge under the Juvenile Deliquents Act of contributing to the girl's delinquency by the acts.

Lawyer Terry Dalton elected trial by judge without jury when Schultz first appeared in court and was denied bail March 14.

★ ★ ★

A 29-year-old man with his third drinking-driving conviction in less than three years was jailed 30 days by Ostler, placed on six months probation and ordered to take any drug and alcohol rehabilitation counselling as directed.

Harry Barber, 9749 Island Highway, entered a change of plea through lawyer Jasper Bomhof to a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Dec. 4 in Colwood.

Crown counsel N.K. Varma told the court Barber was found behind the wheel of his vehicle on the sidewalk in the 1800-block Island Highway. Varma also said Barber was convicted of drinking driving offences on July 3, 1975, and March 23, 1977, and was fined $350 and $750, respectively.

★ ★ ★

Fined $400 after pleading guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Saturday morning was Peter Arne Brown, 23, of Port McNeill.

Rights Ratified

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala's congress has ratified the international human rights convention with a reservation. It specified the ratfication would not affect the Central American country's constitution, current and contemplated laws, and penal codes relating to the death penalty.

Murder Jury Picked

VANCOUVER (CP) — A jury of 10 men and two women Monday heard a brief background summary on the slayings of four Fraser Valley teen-agers.

The summary followed a controversy about whether non-partial jurors can be found to try Walter Murray Madsen.

Madsen, 23, of Chilliwack, 100 kilometres east of here, has pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder in the slayings of Evert Den Hertog, 19, his brother Jan, 16, Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16, last July 18.

Justice J. G. Gould ruled earlier it would be impractical for a defence lawyer to challenge every prospective juror on grounds the case has had wide publicity.

Prosecutor Jack Gibson told the jury that Yvonne Madsen, sister-in-law of the accused, will testify that Madsen drove to her Richmond home in a pickup truck at about 11:30 p.m. on the night of the shootings and took certain objects from the truck into her carport.

Gibson said Madsen will say the accused drove away and she then went to the carport and saw a rifle and a flight bag containing live ammunition.

He said that nothing in his opening address could be considered evidence.

5 Charged After Raid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police charged five men Monday night after an armed gang burst into a Chinatown society games room and stole about $800.

Five men wearing bags over their heads and carrying knives and guns surrounded a table at the Hoi Ming Gwok Society and demanded money.

Charged were David Fong, Sam Eng, Jack Chu, George Tom and Harry Tom.

Two Jailed for One Day

Two Victoria men were convicted in B.C. Court of Appeal Monday of possession of a restricted, unregistered sawed-off shotgun and sentenced to a nominal one day in jail.

The Crown was appealing county court Judge E.J.C. Stewart's acquittal last June of Ossie William Barnes, 28, and Patrick Norman Witter, 20, of three charges — possession of a restricted, unregistered sawed-off shotgun; conspiracy to commit armed robbery March 10 at Coppens Jewellers in Shelbourne Plaza; and attempted armed robbery at Coppens.

The men were convicted by Judge Stewart of possession of a sawed-off shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and sentenced to one year in jail. They have since been released on mandatory supervision.

When court opened, Crown counsel Peter Birkett said the prosecution was abandoning its appeal on acquittal of the charges of conspiracy to commit armed robbery and attempted armed robbery. Defence counsel David Wilson, for Barnes, and Mike Hutchison, for Witter, agreed the appeal should be allowed on the acquittal on the third charge — possession of a restricted, unregistered sawed-off shotgun.

Wilson said both men were in a car moving around the shopping centre where Coppens Jewellers is located. Police arrived before the car stopped and that was the end of the matter. He said the sawed-off shotgun they were convicted earlier of possessing for a purpose dangerous to the public peace was the same weapon they were accused of possessing without a certificate.

He said the second charge was "much less serious" than the first and both Wilson and Hutchison asked the Court of Appeal to consider the time both men have spent in jail.

Mr. Justice Ernest Bull, speaking for the court panel which included Justices A.B. Robertson and J.D. Taggart, said the appropriate sentence would be one day in jail.

Judy Wins One

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Judy Carne, the sock-it-to-me girl of television's Laugh-In, won dismissal of a misdemeanor marijuana possession charge Monday after a sheriff's deputy failed to appear in court, officials said.

Union Hits Bank Layoffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — A recent Canada Labor Relations Board decision on the layoff of a Bank of Commerce employee shows "it's open season on union organizers," a spokesman for the Service, Office and Retail Workers Union of Canada said Monday.

Dodie Zerr said Carol Dulyk, a member of the negotiating committee for workers at the Gibsons branch was laid off in January. She said another union organizer in the bank had been laid off earlier.

The board dismissed an unfair labor practice charge, saying the union would have to "establish that membership in a trade union was present in the mind of the employer in his decision to dismiss . . ."

Zerr said this means that circumstantial evidence is insufficient proof of anti-union bias. She said the manager of the branch admitted at a hearing he was upset that employees in his branch joined the union.

No Snow This Year, Grouse Loses $2.5M

VANCOUVER (CP) — The year ending Oct. 31, 1977, was an "unparalleled disaster" for Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd., said president John Hoegg in the company's annual report released Monday.

Hoegg said that because of a non-existent ski season during the 1976-77 winter, the company had a pre-tax loss of $2.5 million.

To illustrate the lack of snow, the report includes a graph of Feb. 1 snow levels for the last 28 years. On that date last year, Grouse Mountain on the north shore had 11 inches of snow, well below the previous minimum of 49 inches.

The company had a net loss of $1,799,255 or 60 cents a share compared with net earnings of $109,036 or four cents a share in the previous year. Revenue from operations dropped to $3,383,557 from $4,473,265.

Hoegg said problems of the unseasonable lack of snow during the 1976-77 winter were made worse by warm weather that prohibited use of the company's snowmaking machine. The ski runs were closed in early 1977 until mid-March.

Cuts in Staff, Services To Save M-B $5 Million

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd.'s new zero-base budgeting system and reduction of services and staff levels will save the company $5 million this year, says its annual report released Monday.

Calvert Knudsen, company president, and chairman J. Ernest Richardson said reductions will continue in the company's money-losing transportation division, reducing its fleet to about 50 per cent of ocean-shipping requirements.

Transportation losses were $10.9 million before tax recoveries last year, compared with $22.8 million the year before.

Shipping activities plunged the forest corporation into financial difficulties in 1975.

"While transportation losses are expected to continue until freight markets improve, they should gradually decline with further changes in size and composition of the fleet," said the report.

At the end of 1977, MacMillan-Bloedel owned or chartered vessels totalling 577,000 deadweight tons, down from the 1.7 million peak in 1975.

During the year, MB disposed of Canada Gulf Lines Inc. and Swedish Gulf Line AB, two companies acquired in 1973.

The report also said 1977 results were improved by the declining value of the Canadian dollar which partly offset increases in wages and prices paid for goods and services in Canada and elsewhere.

Daughter's Value: $25,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — The future value to a Chinese mother of her daughter, killed in a traffic mishap on her 14th birthday, was placed Monday at $25,000.

Adeline Lai had sued Surgit Kor Gill and Ivor Milburn following a two-car mishap May 13, 1976 in which pedestrian Linda Lai was struck as she crossed a south Vancouver intersection on her way to school.

Justice Thomas Berger held that Milburn, the driver of one vehicle, was two-thirds to blame and Gill, the driver of the other, one-third.

The girl's mother, who is estranged from her husband, sued under the British Columbia Families Compensation Act.

She told the B.C. Supreme Court judge that under Chinese custom, Chinese children look after their parents in their old age and that Linda had said repeatedly this was her intention when she grew up.

"It has been said that nowadays the state is expected to undertake the care of aged parents," Justice Berger said. "Mrs. Lai and Mrs. Wong (the girl's aunt) insist that this is not so in their family and I accept their evidence in this regard."

Greenpeace Denies CIA Joined Movement

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former Greenpeace president Bob Hunter denied Monday that the environmentalist foundation had been infiltrated by the United States Central Intelligence Agency or had any connection with the agency.

He said Paul Watson, who made the allegations Sunday, was seeking revenge because he was forced out of Greenpeace late last year.

Watson said an American hired as an engineer for the 1971 Greenpeace protest against nuclear bomb testing at Amchitka Island was a CIA agent.

Hunter said, however, that he worked with the man for several years and there was no chance that he was with the CIA.

He said he had no idea of the identity of a second suspected agent who was part of the 1977 anti-whaling voyage and who Greenpeace director Mel Gregory said switched allegiance to the ecological movement.

Gregory, who mentioned the second agent in a radio interview Sunday, said Monday: "There was a whole bunch of people we thought were agents — I said there were people around who thought this guy was."

Hunter also denied Watson's statement that Greenpeace accepted fuel from World Airlines owner Ed Daly in the 1977 campaign in return for a promise to go after Russian whalers and leave the Japanese vessels alone.

THOR BURNS BOAT

DJIBOUTI (Reuter) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl burned his reed boat Tigris here Monday in what he described as a protest against the wars raging in the Horn of Africa.

Prof. Heyerdahl, 63, arrived last Wednesday after an adventurous 10-week voyage from southern Iraq down the Gulf of Persia and across the Indian Ocean in an attempt to prove that the ancient Sumerians of Mesopotamia could have reached India and Africa in this type of vessel.

He told an interviewer he and his 10-man crew had set fire to the boat because the civil war in Ethiopia's Eritrea province had prevented them landing at the Eritrean port of Massawa.

He said he had sent a telegram to United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim protesting against the wars in the Horn of Africa and what he called the overarming of countries in the region.

Heyerdahl became famous after his 1947 voyage across the Pacific Ocean in the balsa raft Kon-tiki.

In 1969 he tried sailing Ra 1, a replica of an ancient Egyptian vessel, across the Atlantic from Morocco but abandoned it after a battering from a hurricane.

Parliament A Dud On Radio

LONDON (CP) — Political analysts are generally agreed that the first regular live radio broadcast of debate in Parliament, dominated by cries of "rubbish, resign or be off," was something of an anti-climax.

Many listeners to Monday's speeches from House of Commons, where the fate of the country is decided, preferred to listen to the alternative record request program or Woman's Hour.

A lot of those who did tune in to the proceedings, relayed by the BBC and independent commercial stations, said they could not understand some of the proceedings.

Dafydd Thomas, a governing Labor MP, chose the occasion to launch into a speech in the obscure Welsh language in an attempt to win more recognition for the area.

Technically, proceedings in the Commons must be conducted in English, although Scottish and Welsh Gaelic still are spoken in widespread parts of the United Kingdom.

'Moro Won't Be Killed'

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Members of the Red Brigades urban guerrilla gang declared during their trial Monday that former Italian premier Aldo Moro, kidnapped by their comrades last month, will not be killed.

Giorgio Semeria, one of 15 Brigades members charged with plotting to overthrow the Italian state by force, called out in court here:

"We do not think it necessary to eliminate Moro individually. Moro is experiencing in a 'people's prison' the same psychological torture of compulsory isolation we jailed Brigadists have experienced for years in the special prisons of the regime."

The other defendants, including Brigades founder Renato Curcio, also shouted political slogans recalling "connections" between their trial and the "people's trial" their comrades have said Moro is undergoing.

"You fear that Moro is tortured and treated with chemical drugs you use on proletarians in your prisons," Curcio said. "However, he (Moro) is not treated with the same means you use. We recognize his rights of man and the right not to receive the violence we receive."

Italian medical experts have said the terrorists who kidnapped Moro in Rome on March 16, killing his five bodyguards, may be drugging him or using psychological torture on the 61-year-old politician.

Authorities apparently have no clue where Moro is. Letters sent by his captors have suggested exchanging him for the Turin defendants, but the government and Moro's Christian Democrat party reject that idea.

The defendants again Monday refused to answer questions from the presiding judge.

"You are the defendants here, not us," they said. Three especially noisy defendants were expelled from the courtroom for the day.

Wayne's Heart Repaired

BOSTON — John Wayne, who had a 25-cent-sized circle snipped from his heart and replaced with a valve from a pig, has a 90-per-cent chance to recover from open-heart surgery and return to the adventure films he's made for 50 years, his doctors say.

Surgeons at Massachusetts General Hospital said Monday's "uneventful," three-hour operation was necessary because Wayne's mitral valve had ruptured, allowing blood to seep from his heart into his lung. Doctors said this had made him tired and short of breath.

One physician, Dr. Roman DeSanctis, said he was impressed by Wayne's rugged good health.

"We've seen him in plenty of movies, but I don't think many of us appreciated just how big and strong he is," Dr. DeSanctis said.

"He had been losing his zip," he said. "In the past few months, he has had symptoms of fatigue and shortness of breath and wasn't able to do the things he wanted to."

Though his chances are good, doctors said they are still concerned about the 70-year-old actor's recovery.

"He looks very excellent, but we have a couple of days of worry before us," Dr. Mortimer Buckley, chief surgeon for the operation, said at a news conference after surgery.

Doctors said that if all goes well, Wayne will be out of the hospital in about two weeks and completely recovered in about three months.

"I would guess he will be able to do everything he has been able to do in the past, except better," said Dr. Gerald Austin, chief of surgery.

Wayne, who won the best-actor Oscar in 1969 for True Grit, was paid tribute Monday night at the Academy Awards — immediately after the best-actor award was announced — by master of ceremonies Bob Hope.

"We want you to know, Duke, we miss you tonight," said Hope. "We expect to see you amble out here in person next year 'cause no one else can walk in John Wayne's boots."

One of Wayne's sons, Michael, said in Boston that his father plans to begin filming a movie next fall.

In 1964, Wayne lost most of a lung to cancer.

Margaret Ill in Bed As Criticism Rises

LONDON - Princess Margaret has gone to bed with the flu amid increasing criticism of her June-and-September relationship with brewery heir Roddy Llewellyn.

The Queen's 47-year-old younger sister has had a bad cold for several days.

Margaret has been under fire lately because of a much-photographed winter vacation in the Caribbean with Llewellyn, a would-be night-club singer 17 years her junior who has been her steady companion since she was separated from Lord Snowdon in 1976 after 16 years of marriage and two children.

Labor MPs led by longtime anti-monarchist Willie Hamilton saud the princess was wasting the taxpayers' money and censured her behavior. Dennis Canavan called her a parasite, and was himself censured in the House of Commons.

The Sunday People tabloid reported that its readers voted 3 to 1 that Margaret did not earn the $95,000 a year paid her as a working member of the Royal Family.

The Anglican bishop of Truro, Dr. Graham Leonard, said her vacation was "foolish" and suggested she withdraw from public life. But the bishop of Southwark, Dr. Mervyn Stockwood, an old friend and a controversial figure himself, praised her services to the country and her "help and support" for worthy causes.

MANSON REJECTED

WASHINGTON — For the second time in a year, the Supreme Court today rejected an appeal from mass murderer Charles Manson, who claimed publicity about him during one of his trials "made him a subhuman monster in the public eye."

The court, in a brief order, refused to hear the 43-year-old cultist's appeal of his convictions for the 1969 murder of musician Gary Hinman and one-time movie stuntman Donald "Shorty" Shea, whose body never was found.

Manson was convicted in November 1971 for the two murders and conspiracy, 10 months after he was convicted for the more highly publicized slayings of actress Sharon Tate, four others at her Hollywood home.

He and three women followers were sentenced to death for those murders, but California later banned capital punishment.

Manson and two men in his cult were convicted for the Hinman-Shea killings and Manson got three additional life sentences.

The Supreme Court refused in April 1977 to hear Manson's appeal involving the Tate murder — based on some of the same prejudicial publicity arguments.

ANITA FEARS KILLING

CHICAGO — Anita Bryant expects to be assassinated by homosexuals, says a writer who interviewed her for Playboy magazine.

Author Ken Kelley says in observations accompanying the interview in the May issue that he believes Miss Bryant's fear is realistic.

Miss Bryant made no statement in the interview concerning a possible assassination attempt, but Kelley, 26, said Monday: "We talked about it a lot, especially after she got a pie in the face in Des Moines. She said, 'At least it was better than a grenade.'

"I asked her if she expected a grenade. She said she must expect anything at any time."

In the magazine, Kelley writes: "During the past 12 months, she has weathered bomb threats, snuff letters and numerous close calls with mayhem. But she has learned to take it in stride."

Kelley, who travelled last fall with Miss Bryant and her husband-manager, said Bob Green declared, in his own words, 'Let's face it — when some militant homosexual kills Anita, the guy will be an instant hero.' "

'Witness' A Suspect

LOS ANGELES — A talkative convicted robber who implicated a friend in the Hillside Strangler case is a "prime suspect" himself, police said.

The man who he said committed two murders, meanwhile, has been freed for lack of evidence.

Police Chief Daryl Gates told reporters Tuesday that 37-year-old handyman Peter Mark Jones was released because investigators could not substantiate accusations made against him by George Francis Shamshak.

Annie Hall, Star Wars Are Big Oscar Winners

An estimated 500 Los Angeles police officers, sheriff's deputies and civilian security officers were around and inside the Music Centre, many of them in plain clothes.

Allen's impressive score for Annie Hall also caused some buzzing: best director, best original screenplay, best actress and best picture.

When Annie Hall producer Charles Joffe telephoned Allen in New York to tell him how his picture fared, Allen replied: "Don't bother me, I'll talk to you in the morning."

"He was asleep," Joffe said.

Joffe explained that Allen was not protesting anything by his absence, it is just that "Woody finds it difficult to accept any award of any kind."

Jason Robards picked up his second straight best supporting actor award, the first time that Oscar has been dealt to the same man in consecutive years. He won for his portrayal of writer Dashiell Hammett in Julia. Last year, he won in the same category for his portrayal of Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee in the Watergate yarn All the President's Men.

Robards, the consummate Eugene O'Neill player, was in New York Monday with the O'Neill play, A Touch of the Poet.

THE NFB HAS ITS BEST YEAR

HOLLYWOOD (CP) — The National Film Board of Canada had its best night ever at the Academy Awards Monday, winning two Oscars.

The NFB won Oscars for the best animated short and the best live short. Sand Castle, directed by Co Hoedeman, won the best-animated award, while I'll Find a Way, directed by Beverly Shaffer, won the second Oscar.

National Film Board entries have been nominated for Oscars 45 times.

Hoedeman, a 37-year-old Dutch-born Montrealer, said he made Sand Castle with the hope viewers would understand more about the battle of mankind and nature. The 13-minute film shows creatures emerging out of a wind-blown dune. He said the creatures he created are those he thinks a child would like to see emerging from a sand womb.

I'll Find a Way is a touching half-hour documentary about a handicapped Toronto girl. It was broadcast recently by CBC television as part of its Children of Canada series.

Davis Stripped of Power

Davis said he will be studying the investigation with a view to finding the best way to fight it. He left for Vancouver Monday night and said he would be consulting with his lawyer.

Davis, the MLA for North Vancouver-Seymour, is a former Liberal MP who held various federal cabinet posts.

He ran provincially for the Social Credit party in 1975 and was immediately appointed to the cabinet.

During his term as provincial transport and energy minister, ferry rates more than doubled and natural gas prices increased 10 per cent.

In November, Davis's wide-ranging responsibilities were reduced when the ferries were dropped from his portfolio.

Davis Fourth To Lose Post

Jack Davis — fired Monday by Premier Bill Bennett as minister of energy, transport and communications — is the fourth B.C. minister in 20 years to lose his position before his term of office expired.

A similar action was taken in July, 1973, when Frank Calder was fired from his job as minister without portfolio for Indian affairs by NDP premier Dave Barrett after failing to tell Barrett about an incident involving the police earlier that year.

Calder had been detained for several hours by Victoria police in the April, 1973, for being intoxicated in a public place. Calder was not charged, but the Calgary woman he was with was fined $500 and had her driver's licence suspended for 90 days after pleading guilty to having care and control of a motor vehicle while impaired.

Another cabinet minister who either resigned or was demoted, depending upon who is talking, was Phil Gaglardi.

In 1968, then-premier W. A. C. Bennett shifted Gaglardi from his position as highways minister to minister without portfolio in the Social Credit government, saying Gaglardi was overworked and needed a rest.

In February, however, Bennett revealed during a television interview that he had demoted Gaglardi, because, among other things, Gaglardi failed to disclose full details about how his daughter-in-law flew in a highways department Lear jet.

Robert Sommers, lands and forests minister in the W. A. C. Bennett government in the mid-50s, was sentenced to five years imprisonment in 1958 for bribery and conspiracy after he accepted bribes in connection with the issuance of forest-management licences, although he maintained he had only borrowed money which he expected to return.

Canada, Japan Sign Fishing Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — A new fisheries agreement between Canada and Japan has been signed by negotiators for the two countries, the external affairs department announced Monday.

The department said the agreement, which must still receive formal government approval in Ottawa and Tokyo, sets out the conditions for continued Japanese fishing within Canada's new 200-mile zone.

The agreement was concluded here over the weekend. Negotiations.

AUTOMATED PHONE ADVERTISING

One More Pain in the Ear

By AB KENT
Times Staff

You hear the computer blamed for a lot of things. Now here's another to watch for — the automated telephone advertisement.

If its promoters succeed, it will eliminate the boiler room approach to merchandising, the room full of people with a battery of telephones for selling circus tickets, vacuum cleaners or encyclopedias.

To many it's a pain in the ear, a completely electronic means of piping a sales pitch into the homes of 1,000 phone subscribers at a time without the slightest regard for privacy.

So far it is not a recognized problem here, but according to B.C. Telephone Co. — which claims the gimmick is illegal — the first complaint is in from Victoria and the caller was mightily disturbed.

The chief problem seems to be that once a subscriber answers a sequentially-dialled number he is helpless until the message and reply time has expired.

He can't even say, "Sorry, wrong number," and hang up: the computer rattles on until its programmed time elapses and it goes on to the next number.

Never a human hand touches the sequential dialler once it has been started on its series of calls. During that time nothing a subscriber can do will interrupt it.

He is stuck with it for as long as the robot is programmed to ring, deliver each message and wait for an answer. That may be 30 seconds or three minutes, depending on the wishes of the advertiser and the type of product he is hawking.

Short of refusing to answer his phone, or refusing to hang up when the message and reply time is up, the subscriber who is repelled by this kind of solicitation can only complain to the telephone company, and even that hasn't had much effect on the new practice.

When a number is not answered after a given number of rings, the computer stops trying and goes on to the next listing. When a call is answered but the receiver is not replaced, the circuit remains engaged and the telephone at the other end is unable to ring off, preventing new calls being made.

Keith Matthews, spokesman for B.C. Telephone Co., said the dialling machines have been used to sell everything from distilled water to real estate, and that the company had been successful to some extent in curtailing their use.

Where the machines have been traceable to a telephone connection, the number has been disconnected. But a sequential dialler may be located anywhere there is a telephone line, not necessarily at the place of business of the firm which offers the service, nor the premises of the advertiser, and may therefore be impossible to find.

The Victoria area resident who complained of receiving a computerized call was irate.

"The man said he was called by a machine which mentioned several products. He was called back about an hour later and asked what he remembered of the products," Matthews said.

★ ★ ★

"He became extremely irate. It apparently interfered with his use of the telephone."

Matthews cited a theoretical case in which a computer-dialled call lasting three minutes could coincide with an emergency and lose valuable time in reporting a fire, for example.

He considers the sequential dialling attachment an illegal form of advertising that is without sanction of the phone company or the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, and involves the right of privacy of communication of subscribers.

"The telephone network, per se, is leased for the right of the people to use the system," Matthews said.

Peter Barnes, of the CRTC in Ottawa, said there had been no complaints received from telephone subscribers in B.C., nor from B.C. Tel, but the commission is aware of concern in this province and is familiar with a similar situation involving Bell Canada in Ontario.

"The problem is that B.C. Tel regulations say people are not allowed to connect a network-addressing device to the lines," Barnes said.

The sequential dialler is such a device, and the regulation approved about 20 years ago by a predecessor of CRTC has the force of law because CRTC is a quasi-judicial body.

No formal challenge of the regulation has yet been presented, but if a case is brought the members of the commission would adjudicate it.

Although B.C. and Ontario appear to be the only areas of Canada where computer-dialling is used, Barnes said there could be more than 100,000 units operating in the U.S. In California automated callers were at first disallowed, a decision later reversed, but the issue is still unresolved.

The man forcing the issue in this province is Don Burdenay of Vancouver, a former prairie resident who is known for innovating do-it-yourself divorce and real estate kits. His ILS Realty International Inc., offering no-commission real estate sales service, is a subscriber to the computer system.

Burdenay offers the machines to any advertiser for a rental of $485 a month, a sum of money that would soon be used up in conventional advertising, but pays for thousands of one-to-one ad messages delivered by computer calling that could be spread over many hours of every business day, plus evenings and weekends.

He said B.C. Tel did give permission to install sequential diallers and has reversed its stand. In Toronto, he notes, Bell Telephone actually installed the units for advertisers, then cut them off.

Burdenay said B.C. Tel allows a similar device to be connected to a telephone service, and also installs the unit. It is an automatic dialler with a limit of 50 preselected numbers used in a warning system provided by Vancouver Telephone Answering Service.

"If the consumer didn't want our services, we couldn't stay in business," Burdenay said in defence of the sequential dialler.

★ ★ ★

Said Barnes: "Maybe it's like knocking on doors with magazine subscriptions, or like the junk mail you get in the slot. You can throw it away . . . or you can hang up the phone."

With changing technology, Barnes expects more questions of this type to confront the CRTC. Regulations recently were relaxed to allow subscribers to attach recording devices to telephones, which are widely used by business and professional people to take messages on an unmanned phone.

In combination with the sequential dialler this could produce the ultimate absurdity: one machine talking to another.

$2M Requested To Start Work On Base Update

The defence ministry will ask the treasury board for permission to spend $2 million this year to upgrade Esquimalt military base, Victoria MP Allan McKinnon said today.

If approved, it will be the opening phase of a planned $50 million reconstruction program at the base.

The $2 million would be used for jetty repairs and for studies on a medical building.

The announcement was made this morning in the Commons standing committee on external affairs and defence.

McKinnon said it confirms a statement he made Friday that not one penny had been approved so far for the program which was announced last December.

He said he asked Defence Minister Barney Danson when the announced 10-year program will begin.

"I asked him when Year One would arrive. He said a request for $2 million would go before the treasury board this year. So a small amount of work can be expected this year, if the request for funds is approved."

On Friday a regional spokesman for the defence department said studies on the new Esquimalt medical building would be carried out this year. He said he understood the funds had already been approved.

McKinnon had expressed concern that the Esquimalt expansion program was an empty political promise in advance of an election and nothing would happen for several years.

Projects in the $50 million program include improvements to living accommodations as well as military facilities and are long overdue, McKinnon said.

McKinnon today also urged Ottawa to construct a helicopter rescue base in the Sidney-Victoria area.

He said it is short-sighted to station all five rescue helicopters at the Comox air base.

"Most accidents take place in the Victoria area. By the time the helicopter gets down here the poor fellow in the water would be finished."

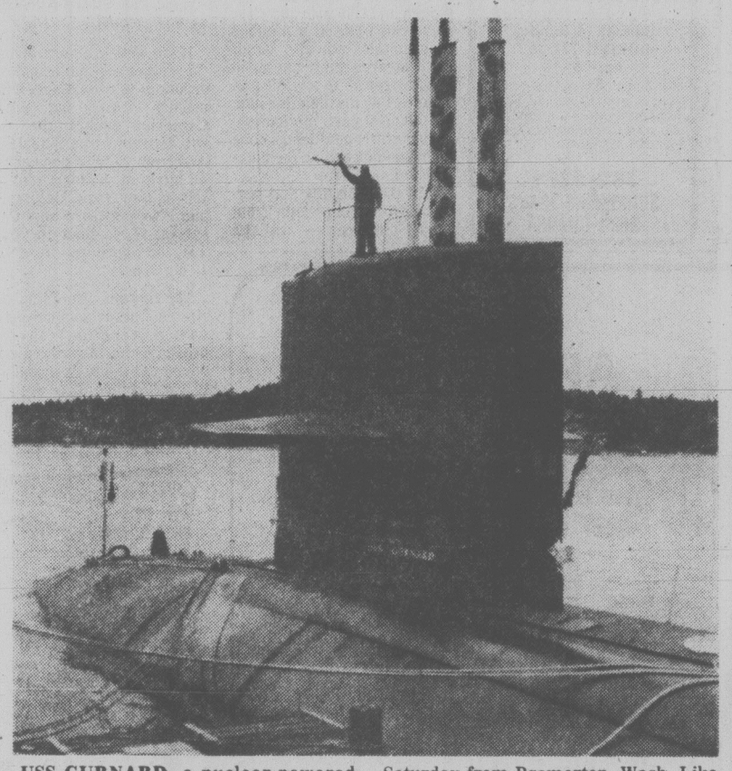
McKinnon said Ottawa has understood this principle on the East Coast but not out west. In 1977, he said, the federal government spent $1.8 million to construct a search and rescue base at Gander, Newfoundland, close to the area where most rescues are carried out.

"They should do the same thing on Vancouver Island, constructing a search and rescue base in the Victoria-Sidney area."

He noted Ottawa spent $3.5 million on search and rescue operations on the East Coast last year in addition to the $1.8 million for the Gander base. By contrast, only $1.8 million was spent on rescue operations in the west.

He said more funds are clearly needed for West Coast rescue operations.

"There are some major disasters each year in the east but there are more boaters on the West Coast — about 200,000. There is no reason why the east should be getting twice as much money for search and rescue work."



USS GURNARD, a nuclear-powered submarine, has paid a goodwill visit to the Dockyard in Esquimalt. The vessel, with a crew of about 120, arrived here Saturday from Bremerton, Wash. Like an iceberg, only one third of the vessel shows above the water. She left today for San Diego. (Bill Halkett photo).

Saanich To Fight For Schools

Saanich council will ask the Greater Victoria school board to consider school closures in Saanich only as a last resort, and after full consultation with the municipality.

A motion to that effect was passed by council Monday night, with aldermen ignoring Mayor Mel Couvelier's advice not to become involved in a problem which lies outside municipal jurisdiction.

Both Ald. Bob Cameron and Ald. John Mika disagreed with the mayor, arguing that school board decisions on such matters directly affect many aspects of municipal responsibility, including planning and zoning policies and the preparation of a draft community plan for Saanich.

Ald. Ian Cass went further, accusing the school board of "delinquency" for failing to provide Saanich with any information on its school closure proposals or involving the municipality in any way.

The motion eventually approved requests the school board to refer the proposals to a joint committee representing the board and Saanich council.

Ald. Fred Severson said the committee met four times last year but has yet to meet this year.

The discussion was sparked by a request for council support against the proposed closure of Tolmie elementary school.

Mika said he was impressed by the brief submitted by the Tolmie Home and School Association.

In other business Monday night, council decided to hold a special meeting of the lands, planning and housing committee later this month, to allow full public debate of a planning department proposal that the subdivision minimum in rural Saanich be doubled to 10 acres.

Couvelier said the meeting would hear the views of residents owning acreage which lies outside the municipality's urban containment boundary.

Council also decided to hold a public hearing on an application by Aske Construction for a land-use contract to build a retail and office building on a 1.2-acre site adjacent to the McKenzie Mall.

Aldermen Reject AirWest Transfer

Victoria council's planning committee today rejected a detailed proposal from AirWest Airlines to move its operation from the south side of the Inner Harbor to the old Ocean Cement site.

Council had already given approval for such a move prividing that the airline did not enlarge its facilities.

The proposal put forward by AirWest called for the extension of floatplane wharves from 120 feet to 510 feet in length.

Committee chairman Ald. Bob Wright said council's suggestion had fallen on deaf ears.

Wright also criticized AirWest for planning to spend $345,000 on the new facilities, pointing out that council had no intention of leasing the Ocean Cement site for more than two or three years.

Daon Fined $1,000

Daon Development Corp. was fined $1,000 today in Victoria provincial court for a misleading advertisement in the Victoria Times last January.

Daon, with 1977 first quarter income of $61.2 million and profits of $2.24 million in the same period, pleaded guilty to misleading advertising Jan. 20 in connection with an ad for townhouses at Montreal and Niagara streets.

Crown counsel Digby Kier, head of the criminal investigation branch of the justice department in Vancouver, said the ad for a three-bedroom home at 8 per cent mortgage was not true. He said an Assisted Home Ownership Plan interest reduction loan had the effect of an 8 per cent mortgage, but that a mortgage was actually 10¼ to 10½ per cent, and that the difference was payable after five years.

Defence lawyer Ronald Stern of Vancouver argued that Kier's point was only true if the property was kept or sold at the purchase price or better.

Stern said Daon's ad agency had been instructed that all ads should comply with the law, and that the agency followed a Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. brochure.

He said no purchaser was actually mislead and anyone who went through with a purchase had the program explained to him.

Victorian 'Mr. B.C.'

The best male physique in the province belongs to Dick Reid of Victoria, judges have decided.

Reid won the title in the 1978 Mr. British Columbia competition.

Reid beat 20 competitors from all over B.C. to win the contest, held in Vancouver.

He will be one of the guest posers at the Mr. Victoria Contest at McPherson Playhouse April 19.

World famous bodybuilder Arnold Shwarzenagger will host the competition.

TOWN TALK

Here it comes Joe Clark, ready or not.

The long-awaited announcement of a federal election will come within the next 10 days, a highly-placed Liberal party source tells Town Talk.

The writ of election will be issued and Canadian voters will go to the polls in the latter part of June.

It means that B.C. Liberal leader Gordon Gibson will now have to decide once and for all whether to stick around and try and keep the party going provincially or seek a federal seat and return to Ottawa where he served as part of the Pierre Trudeau "in-group" before coming here.

This is absolutely and positively the very last time we're going to say anything about Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch.

In case you've forgotten — and how could you? — that typesetter's nightmare is the longest place name in the U.K.

Anyway, Times reader Griff Owens of 31-880 Vernon writes to say that according to the book, A Ward Lock Red Guide, Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch literally means "church of St. Mary in a hollow of white hazel, near to a rapid whirlpool and to St. Tysilio's church near to a red cave".

Mercifully, it is usually abbreviated to Llanfairpwll or Llanfairpg.

The end, hopefully.

Electronic booms and rumbles from the public address equipment, mechanical whirrings and clankings from a battery of drink and candy machines, the sound of footsteps running overhead and sundry other noises all conspired to muffle the sonorous drone of municipal debate at a Saanich council meeting Monday night.

The meeting was held in a foyer at Spectrum school where the concrete walls do not make for good acoustics.

And it didn't help matters that the occasional youngster would wander in during the meeting to extract a chocolate bar or a pop from one of the machines.

After one such interruption Ald. Fred Severson was heard to mutter: "It sounds like Fun City."

But it's all part of the risks involved when council, in a frantic display of democracy and availability, forsakes its comfortably padded seats in the council chamber to take its show on the road.

★ ★ ★

It's an ill wind and all that . . . or there auto be a law

Times photographer John McKay recently grabbed an eye-catching shot at his mother's Victoria apartment when an expensive Mercedes Benz somehow rolled away from its parking place down a hill and into the apartment via a glass door.

McKay (always on the job) dropped over to console Mum and business being business, got a good Page 1 picture.

The picture moved out on the wire to newspapers in the U.S., including, apparently, one in Corvallis, Ore.

A realtor in that community, one Tom Ahlers, spotted the picture and wrote McKay: "Can you give me the name and address of the person whose car ran into your mother's apartment?

"I've been looking for this model to buy and thought they (the owner) might sell the wreck."

★ ★ ★

During a recent Victoria budget meeting city engineer John Sansom explained to council that controls should be installed on water mains to ensure that water used in labs, hospitals or industrial complexes couldn't be sucked back into the general supply by any sudden drops in pressure.

Ald. Murray Glazier agreed, and said that in certain circumstances both the city and big industrial water users, such as breweries, should have such safety devices.

"Would a back-flow from the brewery be a hazard?" asked Mayor Mike Young, as he contemplated the possibility of draft beer coming out the kitchen tap.

"Well," replied Sansom, "I don't think it'd be reported too quickly."

If you have any 1977 50-cent or dollar coins around the house, hold on to them, they could make your fortune.

Paul Joncas, vice-president of the Victoria Numismatic Society, attended the Fraser Valley Coin Show in Abbotsford recently. He says 50-cent pieces were going for $5 each while the dollar coins are so rare they are almost impossible to find.

Tip from the Top and Off They Go

Premier Bill Bennett showed a no-nonsense, rolled-up-sleeves attitude the other day when two aides were unable to get a government car started.

Bennett climbed out of the back seat, popped up the hood of the recalcitrant late-model Pontiac which Press Secretary John Arnett had flooded and while executive director Tony Tozer looked on, rolled up his sleeves, unscrewed the air filter and used his hand to choke the carburetor.

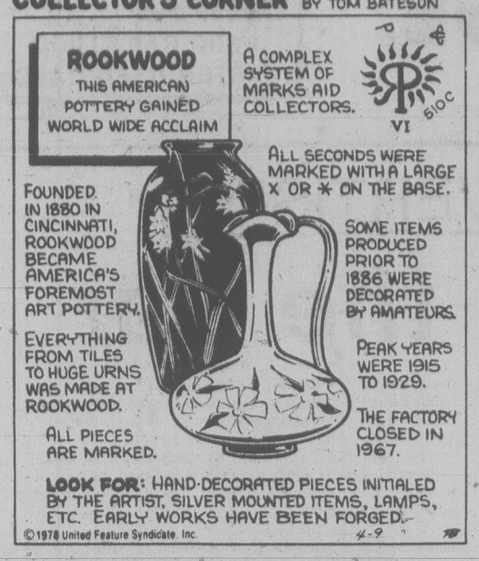
It took a few tries, but finally the car burst into life.

"You're supposed to take these in and get them tuned up every year," he told Tozer and Arnett before climbing into the back seat.

Bennett said he learned the trick on ski parking lots in cold weather.

Oh, Town Talk maybe he'd picked up something from all the car dealers in the government.

COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON



Kids Mostly Puzzled By Newborns

By Virginia Lee Warren
New York Times

NEW YORK — The reactions of children on seeing their newborn brothers or sisters for the first time in the hospital are often surprising. After all, there has been very little time for adults to learn just how children do react to seeing newborns in the hospital; traditionally youngsters have been prohibited from visiting.

But now many hospitals are beginning to allow children to enter the maternity floor — some of the institutions starting the practice only in the last few months. One child, on seeing the newest member of his family, said, "I'd rather have a puppy."

Some of the reactions of 7-year-old Ken Ayugai were typical. He and 6-year-old Yoshiya had been confident they were going to have a baby brother. "They want to be the Three Musketeers," said their mother, Monika Ayugai.

And they got the baby brother all right — seven-pound Makoto. But they also got a baby sister, seven-pound Maya. The family had not expected twins. Ken, after one look through the glass in Roosevelt Hospital's nursery, said, "It's too much," and turned away.

As his parents — his father is Hidekuni Ayugai, executive vice-president of Dainippon Printing Company — continued to gaze fondly at their new offspring, Ken noticed that his mother's stomach, with its relaxed muscles, still protruded. "I think she's got two more in there," he said uneasily. Yoshiya shrugged, by this time resigned to accepting anything.

After Ken had been reassured, he went back to take another look at the little sleeping bundle that was his new brother. (The new sister was largely ignored.) All Ken could see was baby Makoto's head. "I thought he'd be bigger," said the 7-year-old. "He doesn't look as if he could ever play with me."

And in White Plains, when 3-year-old Kerry Anne Coleman took a present — a rattle — to her new baby sister, Deirdre Marie, she was disappointed and puzzled when Deirdre Marie, so wrapped in a blanket that only her tiny, doll-like head was visible, just lay there in the nursery of St. Agnes Hospital, without the slightest interest in the toy.

Yet Kerry Anne's mother, Marilyn Coleman, and her father, Thomas, chief systems analyst for Westchester County, thought they had gotten across to their 3-year-old what the reality would be like and that Kerry Anne knew what to expect.

In instance after instance, though, as talks with nurses in obstetrics units at a number of hospitals indicate, small children are simply unable to relate right off to anything as remote, tiny and helpless and, for the most part, motionless, as those little new beings done up in bundles behind the glass walls of nurseries.

Still the hospitals that permit post-partum visits from small children — and the number of hospitals is growing — consider them worthwhile, if only because they mean so much to the mothers. The women who have left little sons and daughters at home worry about the separation. And, the children seem far more interested in visiting with Mommy, and being assured that she is all right, than in seeing the new baby.

Ken and Yoshiya Ayguai take a peek at their new twin brother and sister

Women who stay in the hospital longer because of a Caesarian section are usually the ones most eager to have their children come to visit. (The Ayugai twins were delivered by this method.)

If the birth is a normal one, the mother goes home in three or four days (at Roosevelt it's usually in two) but, for a Caesarian patient, the stay will be from seven to 10 days. And from 20 to 25 per cent of all births in such large hospitals as New York, University and Roosevelt are now Caesarians. Less than 10 years ago, the figure was from 9 to 12 per cent.

The reasons offered for the rise in Caesarian births are varied, ranging from improved technology that alerts doctors to a fetus's problems to a reluctance these days to use forceps in delivering a baby.

And then there's the spectre of malpractice suits. As Dr. Robert H. Morris of University Hospital said, "You won't be sued if you do a Caesarian, but you might be if you don't."

Doctors and hospitals also have to pay attention to consumer demand, and it was this that persuaded some of them to let the small children come to see mother and the new baby.

New York Hospital pioneered in allowing such visits about eight or nine years ago, but the results then were disastrous. The children ran up and down the halls, switching the lights on and off, playing with other children instead of spending time with their mother and, in general, making a nuisance of themselves. "But now it's on a controlled basis," said Marie Strickland, supervising nurse in obstetrics. "We've got it carefully organized and it seems to be going well."

All the hospitals that permit such visits have set up strict schedules and time limits. In some of them the children may come only once.

Some staffs believe that the pain the children suffer in having to say goodbye to their mothers may negate the benefits of the visit. But this is something the families have to contend with.

What the hospitals have to contend with is the never-ending threat of infection. And there is one rule they intend to adhere to, regardless of the pressure from consumer demand: The children cannot be in the same room with the new baby; they cannot touch it or hold it but must continue to view it through the glass wall.

Fresh eggs left over from Easter? Be eggsactly right! If you scramble a few, beat them with water instead of milk and they'll have more moisture. Don't over-stir; doing so toughens the yolks. To get the most volume out of beaten egg whites, beat them when they are at room temperature. Don't beat them in a plastic mixing bowl; plastic tends to hold onto grease, which prevents whites from foaming well.

Once your Easter calla lilies stop blooming, keep encouraging the bulbs to grow with fertilizer and moist soil into July. Then gradually decrease watering so the bulbs can dry out for the rest of the summer. In September, repot them and start them growing again. The large green leaves make a fine houseplant even if no blossoms appear.

A rubber-backed throw rug shouldn't be a permanent dirt catcher on your vinyl floor covering, for the backing can permanently mark the flooring. Use this type of scatter rug on muddy days or change its place of duty frequently.

Fertilizer that greens your grass should not be used for evergreens. Lawn fertilizer is too high in nitrogen, which makes evergreens grow too fast and that makes them subject to diseases. An all-purpose fertilizer is best for them.

Television Addict Presents Problem

DEAR ABBY: I have been divorced for 12 years. For business reasons, I have lived in another city, so my three sons have been raised by their mother. I have always provided more than the court required and have tried to maintain a good relationship with my sons over the years.

The problem is my oldest son. He graduated from high school two years ago and he is still sitting at home, watching television all day, sleeping late and staying up until all hours. He has no desire to do anything else; no need to get a job because I am required to pay him an allowance until he's 21. This provides cigarette and pocket money. His mother isn't concerned about his idleness because if and when he becomes financially independent, her child support payments will drop, and she doesn't want her income reduced.

I don't think I should support this 19-year-old as I did when he was 12. It encourages his inactivity, but I can't kick him out of his mother's house. Don't recommend psychological help. His mother wouldn't permit it. It would mean that she isn't perfect. I can't cut off the money and force him to get a job. He's not interested in college or trade school. All he wants to do is watch television. He knows every program that comes on between noon and sign-off time.

How can I wake this guy up to the fact that he can't sit on his can forever? Besides, it's a poor example for his two younger brothers, who are still in high school.

CONCERNED BUT HELPLESS

DEAR C AND H: You can't "force" him to do anything. Your only hope is to spend more time with him and inspire him to lead a more productive life. Otherwise he may watch television for another two years, then circumstances may force him to get off his can and be a man.

DEAR ABBY: Have you or any of your readers ever heard of tipping a waitress before she even takes your order?

I have a friend who invariably slips money into the waitress's hand when she first approaches our table.

I asked this friend where he got the idea of tipping first, and he said it was just common sense. A tip in advance usually ensures good service.

I would appreciate any light you can shed on this subject.

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Tipping generously in advance seems more like a bribe than a tip, but it makes sense. The word "tips" (I am told) is an abbreviation for "to ensure prompt service."

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I divorced my husband because he beat me up several times. He never showed any signs of being violent before we were married. There were times when he beat me so brutally I was afraid he would kill me.

I heard that he is going to be married again. I don't know the lady, but I know how to get in touch with her.

I am debating as to whether I should warn her. What do you say?

DEBATING

DEAR DEBATING: On the chance that she'll bring out the best in him while you brought out the beast in him, let mum be the word.

ELEPHANT IN BATHTUB

SHERRILL, N.Y. (UPI) — Now what what sort of topic do you give first graders for a creative writing assignment? Nothing too complicated, certainly, and something easily imaginable would be good.

So how about some straightforward problem-solving: "How Would You Get An Elephant Out of Your Bathtub?"

Just in case you never confronted the problem yourself, some students at the McAllister School in this Oneida County city have delved into the matter for you.

It seems that tugging the trunk is a popular method, with peanuts and mice as reliable aids.

"One day I found an elephant in my bathtub. He was so big, I said, 'Mom, mom! I see an elephant....' I would pull his trunk and kick him. I would give him my toy mouse," Jeannine Diddle said.

It's advisable to have mechanical help as a back-up.

"One day I found an elephant in my bathtub.... I ran out to get the jack, but that didn't work. So, I went out to get a crane and that did work," advised Michael Luft.

But whatever you do, be careful about it. You could wind up with something besides an elephant extrication bill.

Iron — The Key To Marital Bliss?

By L. L. Coleman, M.D.

Apparently, taking iron may eventually solve the divorce problem! It seems that taking iron tablets is the best way of demonstrating devotion between a wife and husband, according to television commercials. I eat a full, nourishing diet. I feed my husband the same. Now, I wonder if I'm not fulfilling my marriage vows because I don't take the added iron that the TV commercials insist on. — MRS. T.T.H.

DEAR MRS. H.:

Some manufacturers of food supplements seem to suggest that almost everyone has an iron deficiency problem and therefore needs their particular product in order to maintain the healthy glow of youth and vigor.

Many of these commercials are aimed particularly at women. There is the intimation that menstruation is always associated with some kind of iron deficiency anemia. This is not often true and it induces in many women an added sense of anxiety. Superimposed on this anxiety is the feeling of guilt for not taking the added iron to "stabilize" a good marriage.

There is, indeed, a very special type of anemia which is referred to as "iron deficiency anemia." The diagnosis cannot be made by a person's appearance alone, for pallor is not the true index of this, or any other, blood condition. There is only one way to determine the presence of iron deficiency anemia, and that is by specialized studies of the blood. The number, the size and the shape of the red blood cells indicate to the doctor the presence or absence of iron deficiency anemia.

With well-balanced meals such as you describe, you are undoubtedly supplying your husband and your family with sufficient iron to satisfy the body's needs. Wouldn't it be wonderful if a few iron pills taken daily would really solve all marital difficulties?

I had never been troubled with gout until I lost 70 lbs. on a rigid high-protein diet. I wonder which is worse, the excess weight or my new problem. Do you think that this condition could come from a big loss of weight? — MR. H. L.

DEAR MR. L.:

Your experience serves to emphasize that any new and tempting diet for overweight should be undertaken only with a doctor's approval. Sensible dietary regimes are less likely to induce unusual reaction. Counting calores and readusting deeply ingrained eating habits is a much more sensible way to lose weight without inviting unnecessary complications. As for your gout, you undoubtedly have been told by your doctor that it can be controlled with medication.

Witch Doctors Help

By EDWARD CODY

DAKAR, Senegal (AP) — When Dr. Henri Collomb started taking advice from witch doctors 20 years ago, his colleagues told him he was too old to dabble in superstitions.

"And now everyone's interested in traditional medicine," chuckled the white-haired French psychiatrist, director of Fann Psychiatric Hospital at Dakar. "People are coming here from all around — from other African countries, Europe and the United States — to see what we are doing."

They find a well-known West African witch doctor co-operating with Collomb and his scientific staff in attempts to mix what's good in witchcraft with what's good in modern medicine to heal mental disorders.

The effort is part of a broadening trend by health authorities in Africa to investigate the healing power of traditional village witch doctors and herbal pharmacy, particularly for remote areas with few doctors.

Collomb, 64, came to this West African country in 1959 with standard European psychiatric training from University of Bordeaux.

"I realized quickly that all patients who came here had previously been cared for by witch doctors, would go to witch doctors when they left and were being treated by witch doctors, more or less secretly, even while they were here," he said. "When my patients spoke to me of devils, hexes and so on, I naturally got interested."

As a result, Collomb became convinced African healers, as a reflection of their cultures, had something to teach European psychiatry in the care of African mental illness.

"In the spirit of witch doctors, the mental patient is someone under attack," he explained. "So they don't defend society against the patients, isolate them. Instead, they defend the patients against the attack by evil spirits and this attitude makes healing much easier."

Collomb started by visiting witch doctors' "healing villages," such as that run by the late prophet Mamadou Sane at Marwa in Senegal and prophet Albert Hatcho's village at Bregbo in Ivory Coast.

In them, members of patients' families remained to help in the cure, reassuring the patient and making day-to-day care easier. The patients were allowed to roam freely about the villages under supervision of their families.

"If you shut away the patient as in Europe, you only make it more difficult to cure him," said Collomb, recalling the strong sense of family and community in traditional Africa.

Collomb opened two psychiatric villages of his own, patterned after the healing villages of witch doctors. One is at Botou in eastern Senegal and the other near Ziguinchor in the Casamance region south of the Gambia River.

The Botou establishment for about 30 patients cost $16,000 compared with $600 million for a 120-patient hospital planned in a neighboring West African country. Collomb estimates it costs 10 to 20 times more in a European-style hospital than to care for patients there, under a team including visiting psychiatrists and psychologists and a full-time nurse.

Results in such villages are comparable with those obtained in modern psychiatric hospitals, he said, and developing countries in Africa can more easily afford and staff them.

Patients get scientific care with chemical medicine, as they would in a European-style institution, but with an African orientation supplied by study of village healers' lore.

The witch doctors' craft, however, is losing its effectiveness because of a surge in the number of charlatans, Collomb said.

"The real witch doctor doesn't make people pay, or just a little. But there now is a wave of witch doctors who are just fakes in it for the money, particularly in the big cities such as Dakar."

Don't believe our ads until you've driven our cars.

The new Chevrolet Malibu. Everything we've said in our ads is true. But you've got to drive it to believe it.

We're asking you to swallow a lot. The new standard Malibu, compared to last year, is over 600 pounds lighter, almost 18 inches shorter. And yet many interior dimensions are larger.

So we're issuing an invitation. Come in to your Chevrolet dealer. Take a test drive. Check the back seat and check the front. Your own sense of comfort tells you that Malibu is bigger inside, smaller outside. As a matter of fact, rear seat hiproom in the 4-door Malibu sedan is as wide as in the full-size Chevrolet sedan.

Now feel the ride. Instead of concentrating on the length, we've concentrated on the suspension. The new Malibu gives you ride qualities associated with cars of a longer wheelbase.

Even the trunk will amaze you. Helped in part by GM's new compact spare tire, it actually offers more cubic feet of space than last year. The dash is divided into functional sections that can be removed for easier servicing. A two-level power ventilation system on the sedan and wagon selects cool air for face level, warm air at foot level. It combines with new opening rear vent windows to draw fresh air through the car, even when stopped.

Standard engine on Malibu is a compact V-6 which, with less weight to pull, can mean better fuel economy. A compact V-6 engine with available automatic transmission that delivers 38 km/gal. city, 54 km/gal. highway, 44 km/gal. combined based on approved Transport Canada test methods. (Remember these fuel economy figures are estimates which may be subject to revision. The actual fuel economy you get will vary depending on the driving you do, your driving habits, your car's condition, and available equipment.) In engineering, styling, roominess and efficiency, Malibu can offer the resale value people traditionally look for in GM cars.

We began by asking you not to believe our ads until you drove our cars. Because after you drive the new Malibu, we think you will be the best advertisement we've got. Buying or leasing? See Your Chevrolet Dealer soon.

The Beauties Show It Off

By ENID NEMY
New York Times News

NEW YORK — At one time, the embarrassment of it all would have sent even strong women into a decline. Dresses were as individual as husbands, maybe more so. Especially expensive dresses.

Now, the ways of the rich being what they are, the ownership of the dress of the season, or the dress of the year is almost like membership in an exclusive club.

This season the Cadillac of the fashion world is a three-piece Adolfo design in gold and burgundy. It should be pointed out that in the trade, as they say, a best-selling dress is called a Ford, but it needn't be pointed out that anything that sells for $750 is in another class.

To date, Adolfo has sold about 500 of his three-piece evening outfits, and although the design was one of his favorites, even he was somewhat surprised at the response.

"All my beauties have it," he said. Adolfo refers to all his clients as beauties, and a good number of them actually are.

The dress that all the beauties are wearing is an accordion-pleated skirt and soft shirt in a dull gold lame on silk chifon, topped with a gold-braid-trimmed silk and wool cardigan in a clear burgundy shade. The cardigan is worn over the shoulder, when the wearer wishes to be dashing, and with arms in the sleeves when the air-conditioning works to well.

"We all love it, it suits our way of life," said Betty Meadows, who has homes in both Dallas and Palm Beach and travels a good deal with her husband, who is an oil executive.

"You can do anything you want with it," said Jean Tailer of New York, Southampton and Palm Beach. "It can be dressed up, or dressed down, it travels like a dream and it's comfortable and pretty." Mrs. Tailer, like a number of other women, ordered the outfit with a fourth piece — a chalf-length skirt made in the same color and of the same silk and wool material as the cardigan.

Among the 500 women who ordered the dress are some of the most glittering names in the glittery group whose names spell money, international set and fame of one kind or another. They include Betsy Bloomingdale, Irene Dunne, Harriet Deutsch, Anne Johnson, who was once Mrs. Henry Ford 2nd, Fran Stark, Dinah Shore, Nancy Reagan, Audrey Meadows Six, Barbara Sinatra, Marlo Thomas and Lee Annenberg on the west coast, and Eleanor Revson, Key Meehan, Jan Chipman, Lauren Peltz, Isabelle Leeds, Hope Gropper, Audrey Zauderer, Carokline Amory, Lyn Revson, Marilyn Obolensky, Rosalie Levine, Robin Duke, Susan Stein, Joan Tisch, and Gladys Solomon on the east coast.

Dinah Shore, who does some 242 television shows a year, described the dress as "heaven."

Miss Shore said she particularly liked the fact that the dress allowed sufficient room for "moving beautifully," but still looked slim.

And how do the beauties feel when several of them show up at the same time and the same place in the dress?

"We don't care," Betty Meadows said. "We're even thinking of having a dinner one night of all the dress owners."

So there.

Three-piece Adolfo dress of the year.

Ashtrays Can Be Deadly

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Tom Appleton has advice for lazy housekeepers who don't empty ashtrays. Ashtray contents can kill.

Two cigarette butts can do the job — if the butts are swallowed. Most adults would never dream of doing such a thing, but it's a different matter with children, said Appleton, a researcher at London's poison-control centre.

"It's amazing what kids will take and keep down." In cigarettes, the poison is nicotine. Each butt contains six mg, and 10 mg will kill a child.

Appleton, a master's student in epidemiology at University of Western Ontario, is conducting a study of London's poison-control centre in Victoria Hospital.

The study involves examining each case handled by the centre during a one-year period to determine the patient's age and sex, the time of occurrence and type of poisoning treated.

The study isn't complete, but Appleton said he has noticed a few trends developing. Types of poisoning have changed in the last few years. Gone are traditional skull-and-crossbones poisons such as arsenic, mercury and lye.

They are replaced by modern toxic substances such as silver polish, Valium and even vitamins.

Appleton said he knows of a case where a child ate a bottle of chewable vitamins because he thought they were candy. Instead of making him healthy, the vitamins dissolved the boy's stomach lining.

Carelessness and ignorance are major causes of accidental poisoning, Appleton said. Most parents keep rat poison and lye out of reach but they forget other products equally as dangerous.

Children between one and four are the group most prone to accidental poisoning. They have a tendency to put anything into their mouths, including drain and toilet-bowl cleansers, shampoo and hair-setting lotion.

Sometimes they think they are eating candy. This is especially true of medicine, Appleton said. Parents occasionally tell their children medicine is candy to trick them into taking it, and it's not unusual for a child to swallow a whole bottle when alone.

Sometimes poisoning is a case of mistaken identity. Parents transfer the contents of one bottle into familiar containers such as soft-drink bottles or milk cartons and the child consumes the contents thinking he is swallowing something else.

But accidental poisoning isn't restricted to childrn.

"You'd be surprised at he number of old peple we get," Appleton said. With adults, poisoning usually involves drugs and medication.

Prescription drugs are a real problem. People either take excessive doses or use the drugs for illnesses other than those for which the medication was prescribed.

Sometimes medicine has been in cabinets so long that either people forget what it was prescribed for or it undergoes a change in strength.

Appleton said it is impossible to tell how many persons are treated for poisoning in Canada or even what the most common type of poisoning is.

He said poisoning has a low priority, and the 300 poison-control centres across Canada run on shoestring budgets. They can't afford researchers to sift trough their data.

"Victoria wants an active research project to determine what sort of health problem poisoning is — major or minor."

Victoria's poison-control centre, which serves London and the surrounding area, is funded through the emergecy department's budget.

"If you haven't got the statistics to prove how prevalent poisoning is, you can't prove you need the money," Appleton said.

The centre handles about 1,000 calls a year, said Dr. K. G. Ferguson, director of emergency medicine at Victoria Hospital.

However, the hospital has no up-to-date statstics. Every time it handles a case, a form is sent to the national poison-control centre in Ottawa. The Ottawa centre compiles the statistics but they take a long time to sift through each poison-control centre in Canada.

"We've just received the statistics for 1974," he said.

Pregnant Weight Up

NEW YORK (AP) — For years doctors have advised women not to gain much weight during pregnancy. But now such authoritative groups as the National Research Council and American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists are recommending that pregnant women gain 20 to 25 pounds during their term.

Dr. Myron Winick, director of the Institute of Human Nutrition at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, says infant death rates and sickness are much greater statistically among babies with a low birth weight.

Writing in Modern Medicine magazine, Winick says 18 countries have lower infant mortality than the United States and the major contributing factor is the relatively high incidence in the U.S. of low-birth-weight infants.

Heart Attack Hazard

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women between 30 and menopause who smoke cigarettes and take the pill or estrogen for reasons other than contraception are more likely to suffer heart attacks than women who avoid one or the other, new studies show.

The two studies are in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

One study concerned women who take oral contraceptives while the other study concerned women who take estrogens for noncontraceptive purposes, such as to provide a hormone supply after a hysterectomy.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said that women should change to another form of contraception if they do not stop smoking.

"The present data provide strong evidence that oral contraceptives increase the risk of nonfatal acute myrocardial infarction (heart attack) in otherwise healthy women with no predisposing medical conditions," wrote the research team with the Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program.

However, they added, "acute MI in otherwise healthy premenopausal women is almost exclusively an illness of cigarette smokers.

"Therefore, we estimate that among non-smokers the risk of nonfatal MI attributable to oral contraceptives (or any other cause) is extremely small. The risks for women who smoke and use oral contraceptives, howevever, are substantially larger, ranging from an estimated one per 8,400 annually in women aged 27 to 37 to one per 250 for women aged 44 to 45 years."

In the other study, the researchers said, "The present data provide substantial evidence that noncontraceptive estrogens increase the risk of acute MI in women younger than 46 years."

The studies were conducted by Dr. Hershel Jick and Barbara Dinan, a registered nurse, at Boston University Medical Center, and Kenneth J. Rothman, a doctor of pharmacy, at Harvard University School of Public Health.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

A tournament player recently went to see his doctor for a checkup. "My wife thinks I'm worrying too much," he stated. "She's afraid it will damage my health."

"If that's all that's wrong with you," the doctor answered, "then you have nothing to be concerned about. As a matter of fact, a few weeks ago I had another bridge expert as a patient. He was also worrying too much, and I cured him by convincing him not to think so hard."

"I know," said the patient-to-be. "That's why I'm worrying so much. The man you cured of thinking was my partner."

In today's deal, our South declarer was guilty of the "crime" of not thinking. It cost him the game and rubber.

Both sides vulnerable.

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

After winning the opening diamond lead with his ace, declarer cashed the ace and king of trumps. He then led the jack of clubs, and West took his ace. West now played the 10 of diamonds, East's king winning. East returned a heart, and West cashed two heart tricks, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

As soon as the dummy came into view, declarer should have recognized that the danger to his contract lay in East's procurement of the lead. If this happened (as it did), then a shift to hearts by East figured to result in declarer losing two heart tricks (as he did). Of course, if the defenders didn't cash two heart tricks, then South would later discard one of his hearts on dummy's to-be-established club suit.

Declarer's primary concern should have been to prevent East from obtaining the lead. He could have accomplished this simply by allowing West's diamond queen to win the opening lead. After gaining the lead, declarer would draw trumps, and then attack the club suit, driving out West's ace. On dummy's fourth club, South would discard his seven of hearts.

Survival Suit Found, Search On

Recovery of a second survival suit about 17 miles off Calvert Island Monday has reopened the sea search for three men lost Easter weekend from a 38-foot American troller.

The new, all-aluminum Nancy L was found wrecked on Calvert Island in Queen Charlotte Sound, her crew and a covered life raft missing.

The men are Clarence Freshour, 40, of Craig, Alaska; Albert Freshour, 68, and Bob Castleberry, both of Colorado, who left Anacortes for Craig March 23.

Capt. Frank Gavin of the rescue co-ordination centre in Victoria said the fact that the immersion suit was found so far offshore had resulted in the decision to extend the search seaward.

A Tracker and Buffalo aircraft from CFB Comox, the Coast Guard cutter Ready and numerous fisheries and private fishing vessels are taking part.

They are retracing 20,000 square miles of open sea that was covered in recent searches for the Ocean Invader and Gustav, fishing vessels that apparently foundered in Queen Charlotte Sound.

The earlier search for the crew of Nancy L was conducted closer to Calvert and on about 15 kilometres of shore after the wrecked vessel was found.

Gavin said it is strongly suspected the vessel encountered weather problems, as March 25 and 26 were stormy.

The first survival suit was found on a beach on Calvert. Neither outfit had been broken out and worn. The Nancy L carried four sea immersion suits.

Nancy L had only recently been completed and it is believed Clarence Freshour was taking her home to Craig on her maiden voyage.

Saanich Council Asks More Youth Job Data

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier was told by aldermen Monday night they need more information before discussing his recommendation that Saanich withdraw its applications for funding under the federal and provincial youth employment programs.

Couvelier had recommended the pull-out because the union's position is too onerous on the taxpayer.

He said earlier that Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees wants Saanich to pay full union rates for most provincially subsidized jobs and all federally funded jobs, as well as a premium of 69 cents to $1.29 an hour for playground supervisors.

Aldermen indicated they need more information on how much municipal cash would be involved in meeting the union demands and on the number of student jobs affected.

They also endorsed Ald. Howard Sturrock's suggestion that Couvelier seek permission to address the union membership before an April 11 meeting when the local makes its final decision on the hiring of young people for summer jobs.

Chabot Denies Taking Free Air Flights

Mines Minister Jim Chabot denied suggestions Monday in the legislature he received free air flights during the last provincial election campaign.

Dennis Cocke (NDP-New Westminster) asked Chabot, Highways Minister Alex Fraser and Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt if they or any of their workers received such air service during the last election campaign from Air Canada, CP Air, Pacific Western or AirWest airlines.

Chabot, the only minister to answer, said he hadn't received any such free service.

Hewitt would not comment outside the house.

Fraser said as far as he can remember he was in his riding "shovelling snow every night."

He said he's certain he didn't leave his Cariboo riding from Nov. 3 to Dec. 11, 1975 — the dates of the campaign.

Cocke said he will pursue the matter with Speaker Harvey Schroeder to get the ministers to answer on the record.

Fraser was also asked by Emery Barnes (NDP-Vancouver Centre) if he appointed a campaign worker George Rigsby to the board of the directors of the new B.C. Buildings Corp.

Fraser would say only that a George Rigsby had been appointed to the board.

He later said Rigsby, a Quesnel chartered accountant had been his official agent in the last three election campaigns.

An official agent looks after legal and technical duties such as ensuring nomination papers are filed properly.

Barnes said such political patronage undermines the credibility of the housing corporation and added that he was sure from the beginning the corporation would be a pork-barrel.

"Now I'm convinced it is."

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson asked Health Minister Bob McClelland why audiologists coming out of the University of B.C. weren't getting hired while American graduates are.

McClelland said he has formed a committee to look into the matter. He said he was unaware of a report from the Universities Council of B.C. which Gibson says is critical of the health ministry for not hiring UBC grads.

NDP House leader Bill King (Revelstoke-Slocan) asked Forests Minister Tom Waterland if he could guarantee Domans will build a new pulp mill in B.C.

Waterland said that the agreement with Domans is that if the company is to get a certain timber licence, it has to build a sawmill and a pulp mill when "economic conditions are correct."

He said there is no time frame involved but when conditions are right he is sure the company will honor its commitment.

APPLAUSE GREETS STEPHENS' ENTRY

Conservative leader Vic Stephens got a desk-thunding welcome to the legislature Monday and a word of advice from Attorney-General Garde Gardom: "Enjoy it because it will likely be the last applause you'll hear."

Stephens, who won the March 20 Oak Bay byelection, was escorted to his seat by the NDP house leader Bill King and Gardom.

A warm reception was also given to Gordon Gibson Sr. who turned up in the public gallery.

Premier Bill Bennett extended his best wishes to the former MLA, adding that he would reserve his best wishes for Gibson Jr. "when we find out what he's going to do."

The Liberal leader is said to be considering resigning to run in the soon-to-be-called federal election.

WELL QUALIFIED LADY would like

GARDENING
jack beastall

Garden asparagus from beds planted three years ago have proven disappointing to several home gardeners who were expecting a good crop this spring.

Instead of the luscious green spears, these gardeners can find only woody growths about one-half the diameter of an ordinary pencil.

The most common cause of this is the wrong kind of plants. The garden asparagus produces both male and female plants from seed.

The male plants produce the spears for eating, while the female plants produce the seeds that are sown to obtain more plants. Female plants never produce edible spears.

The disappointed gardeners who have contacted me all report the most of their plants produced berries last year.

These plants should have been lifted and destroyed as soon as the berries appeared. If this is not done the berries mature and the bed soon becomes a mass of seedlings, most of which will again be female plants.

Seed of asparagus is sown very thinly in rows and the seedlings allowed to grow for the first season. The next spring the seedlings are transplanted and spaced four to six inches apart according to the amount of growth made the first year. The soil is well prepared with compost and manure.

In good soil the female plants will bear berries during the second summer and are immediately lifted and discarded before the berries mature and fall.

The remainder are considered to be male plants suitable for sale, but it is always possible that some of these may produce berries in the following year. The gardener buying plants must watch for these and destroy them.

When no berries are produced and the edible spears do not materialize, we have to look for some other cause, such as too stiff a clay soil, too shallow planting, roots under water over winter, or insufficient feeding.

The garden asparagus is a gross feeder. Seed catalogues advise dressing the bed with a "blanket" of manure or good compost every fall and an early spring application of 5-10-10 at four pounds to 100 sq. feet of bed.

Seaweed is added on top of the manure or compost during the winter in coastal area, starting after the November gales have deposited the weed on the beaches.

With proper feeding a fifty foot row containing 35 plants should yield around 15 pounds of large diameter spears by the third year after planting.

Cutting and harvesting is an important part of asparagus culture. The gardener must be very conservative the second year, taking only enough spears to sample the crop.

In the next few years, the number of weeks cutting may continue depends on the amount of growth made the previous season. A safe rule to follow is to cut for one week for every foot of growth made the previous year, the growth being measured in late summer. Four foot of growth allows four weeks of cutting.

Cutting starts when the spears are four to six inches high, just before the scales at the tips begin to open. Cuts are made at soil level or just below. Cutting too deeply below soil level increases the chances of damaging other spears.

Cease cutting, on mature plants, when spears become less than a full half-inch in diameter, usually by July 1st, and allow all shoots that appear later to form a bushy plant five to eight feet in height.

In late September cut all plants to soil level and dress the bed with the manure and compost.

IMAGINE!

Your friends drop in and they will be unable to shake your hands and say hello because the view took their speech away. You'll show them the Coastal Range in the distance. Gordon Head, University, Mt. Baker, Mt. Tolmie, the City, Olympics, Cedar Hill Golf Course, and the Sooke Hills. Truly 360-degree view. Your friends will be green with envy: so much so that they won't even see the great house with super size living room, family room, dining room, master bedroom with ensuite of imperial proportions and its own private deck. They probably will even miss seeing the "in ground" swimming pool — well, that way they get the green off their faces. A bargain at $124,500. Call:

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Friday; 8:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate

Diplomats Live It Up As Their Nations Starve

OTTAWA (CP) — Some of the poorest nations in the world have embassies in Ottawa but that doesn't stop their diplomats from living in splendor.

The tiny African nation of Upper Volta, for example, is given more than $40 million of Canadian aid annually.

Yet, it houses its ambassador in a six-bedroom Ottawa residence complete with swimming pool. Together with its fashionable three-story embassy building in the Sandy Hill section of the city, the total value of its property amounts to $340,000.

Upper Volta's Ambassador Louis Ouedraogo makes no apology for his country's lavish real estate purchases despite its annual per capita income of only $70.

"An ambassador needs accommodation that is in keeping with his role as representative of his government," said Oudraogo. "He does a lot of entertaining and he cannot receive 200 to 300 guests in an apartment.

"Just because Upper Volta is a poor country, it does not mean that its envoy has to put up with second-rate housing in the host country."

The government of Cameroon, another west African nation with a per capita income of about $200, has spent more than $500,000 buying two properties since Ambassador Martin Epie set up a diplomatic mission here three years ago.

Cameroon's holdings consist of a six-bedroom, split-level home with an outdoor pool in neighboring Nepean Township and a three-storey embassy building in Ottawa's Glebe section. The residence alone cost $390,000.

Cameroon received almost $7 million in aid from the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA) in 1976.

The ambassadors say it is common sense for their nations to purchase real estate rather than pay rent.

"It would be just throwing money away to lease suitable living and office space in Ottawa," said Epie. "Besides, if you own your house in the Ottawa area it is a sound investment."

Upper Volta and Cameroon are two of the more than 30 developing nations of Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Commonwealth Caribbean maintaining properties in the national capital region for their diplomatic representatives.

Other nations, such as India and Pakistan, have owned residences almost from the time they set up diplomatic posts in Ottawa more than 25 years ago. They have been major recipients of Canadian economic aid for many years.

And Indonesia, which takes one of the larger slices of the Canadian foreign aid budget — $22.4 million last year — houses its ambassador in a $425,000 home in Ottawa's opulent Rockcliffe area.

Latest figures show there are more than 125 foreign-owned properties in Ottawa — double the number 20 years ago — with a total market value of more than $25 million.

Nearly half of the 92 resident ambassadors and high commissioners in Ottawa represent Third World nations, and virtually all of them receive a chunk of CIDA's current budget of $1.1 billion.

The external affairs department does not advise diplomatic representatives on the economics of planned property purchases.

It simply asks for prior information on the location of the place to be bought to ensure that the intended use does not conflict with city zoning bylaws.

"It's not up to us to tell the governments concerned how to spend their money," said an external affairs official. "That's up to them. After all, they have to justify their expenditures to their people."

City Students in Ottawa

Six senior students from Greater Victoria schools are in Ottawa attending a week's session of the Student Commonwealth Conference.

They are Tom Mueller, Spectrum Community School; Lorraine Nygaard, Esquimalt Senior Secondary School; Dawn Wilson, Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School; Andrew Baldwin, Brentwood College, Pat Costello, St. Michael's University School; Lise Moreau, Norfolk House School.

The conference coincides with the biennial meeting of the Commonwealth Youth Affairs Council attended by delegates from various parts of the Commonwealth.

Sponsored by the Royal Commonwealth Society, the conference will discuss Rhodesia and the Commonwealth; Full Utilization of Human Resources Potential in the Commonwealth; and Human Rights in the Commonwealth — a Charter?

Tribute Paid To Sister Art

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A salute to a sister art was the nature of the weekend programs performed by Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

It had as its guests, operatic singers Rosita del Castillo, a dramatic coloratura soprano, and Eduardo Melgar, tenor, and conducted by Laszlo Gati, it performed the theatrical Leonora Overture No. 3, Cavalleria Rusticana Intermezzo, and Schubert's Rosamunde ballet music.

Excerpts from Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor occupied most of the second half of the evening and featured the two Venezuelan singerss.

Of a less directly dramatic nature, but more in the realm of the tone poem, is the unusual Gliere Concerto for Soprano and Orchestra.

This two-movement work owes something to a variety of musical progenitors, among them Debussy and Richard Strauss; it has a flowing and dream-like beauty in which the textural qualities of the human voice, expressed in simple vowel sounds are effectively displayed against and within the orchestra fabric.

Del Castillo has the necessary power, resonance and range to perform the work successfully. Her voice is full and extremely flexible in pacing flute and clarinet and in coping with flourishes and trills in the upper reaches of her compass. Some of the long phrases in the Gliere were finely shaped and colored despite a tendency toward a rather heavy vibrato and a problem with intonation on the final top note.

In the Donizetti arias and duet Castillo was dramatically effective and affecting as the tragic Lucia, her voice blending with and complimenting Melgar's in the concerted singing of the familiar parting duet.

A robust tenor quality is possessed by Melgar, the bel canto production being most effective within a somewhat limited range. The lower part of the middle voice however, is strangely lacking in color and clarity and at least on Monday night, there was trouble with a top note in the climax of the duet. But Melgar's presence and obvious operatic stage expertise suggests that possibly the singer was suffering some indisposition on this occasion.

There were problems too with the orchestral accompaniment in which the brass tone was overly coarse at times and the flute suffered a misfortune at one cogent point.

In the Leonora No. 3, there were some especially fine pianissimo effects evoked by Gati and generally good dramatic color. Off-stage solo trumpet passages were played with precision and clear fine tone. The Intermezzo was well done with appealing lyricism but the Rosamunde was quite careless with untidy phrase endings. It lacked delicacy, was imprecise and often hurried in tempo.

SEPTIC TANK DANGER CITED

Effluent from faulty septic tanks and septic fields in Deep Cove and other parts of the municipality are a danger to human health, Ald. Edgar Farthing told North Saanich council Monday.

His comment followed a report that effluent from septic tanks of various residents in the municipality is creating pollution problems.

Mayor George Westwood said the municipality has been plagued by an effluent problem for about 10 or 15 years.

"A solution won't come overnight," he said.

Municipal engineer Leo den Boer told council he would like to see a report on the situtions handed over to the local medical health officer by April 15.

"I believe the health inspector has gone to four or five homes and wasn't able to gain entry," he said.

Study Sought

Esquimalt council's public works committee Monday recommended to the national defence department an environmental impact study before it goes ahead with a five-acre landfill in Lang Cove on Esquimalt Harbor.

The project is part of a DND plan to construct additional recreational facilities.

Lang Cove is between HMCS Naden and Yarrows Ltd.

The committee asked for a road allowance along Lang Cove to enable the municipality to establish a one-way link between Constance and Admirals Road.

It also requested the recreational facilities not block the water view of neighboring residents.

2 Air Force Pilots Killed

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — Two pilots were killed Monday in the crash of a Tutor training jet about seven miles east of Canadian Forces Base Moose Jaw.

A base spokesman said the two were on a routine training flight when the crash occurred Monday afternoon.

The pilots' names were withheld pending notification of next-of-kin.

Minority Failure Forecast

REGINA (CP) — Peter Newman, editor of Maclean's Magazine, said Monday neither Pierre Trudeau or Joe Clark should be allowed to lead a federal minority government which must deal with Quebec's separatist aspirations.

Newman told the annual convention of Saskatchewan's Credit Union Central that instead, a "national government" should be established.

Newman told a news conference later he had no suggestions who should lead the proposed "national government." He was also unclear how that government would be selected. He suggested it could consist of volunteers wishing to save Canada.

Newman said there is every indication the next federal election will produce a minority Liberal or Progressive Conservative government.

"If a minority government is elected, then the logical conclusion is that the leadership of both political parties is bankrupt," he said.

He predicted the Conservatives would do well to hold on to the three seats they now have in Quebec.

Newman said the Quebec government is tough and single-minded in its goal of breaking up Canada. "The country cannot survive under the pressure of a (minority) government trying to cling to power during crucial negotiations with Quebec."

He predicted the Parti Quebecois would hold its promised national unity referendum in 1979. He later said a second federal election could be held in the meantime, producing a majority government in Ottawa and eliminating the need for a national government.

Newman predicted the Quebec referendum would be a single yes-no question on sovereignty association.

Que.Must Decide - CLC

QUEBEC (CP) — After months of agonizing, the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) has decided that Quebec residents should have the right to determine their own political destiny.

Since the election of the Parti Quebecois government 19 months ago, the labor movement has been locked in an emotional debate on the future of Confederation.

A carefully-worded policy document, adopted at the CLC national convention Monday, stressed that the labor movement must remain united whatever the outcome of the planned referendum on Quebec independence.

"We, the working people of Canada, share an economic, political and constitutional system which today is creaking under the strain of near-chaos," the congress said.

The statement said union members, with other Canadians, must "seek a new political and constitutional relationship," but hastily added that "we cannot yet determine what that relationship will be."

During the debate, a number of speakers, both French- and English-speaking, attacked the reference to a "new relationship" as an endorsement of a united Canada. Critics of the policy statement said it was an unwarranted attempt to influence Quebecers.

THUMBING GETS EXIT

QUEBEC (CP) — A delegate from the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) was expelled from the convention of the Canadian Labor Congress Monday after he gave CLC president Joe Morris the thumbs-down sign.

Darrell Tingley of Amherst, N.S., Atlantic director of CUPW, raised a point of order, calling on Morris to follow the CLC constitution and allow debate on resolutions to continue as long as delegates wanted to speak.

"If they are going to railroad things, there is no purpose in being here," Tingley said later in an interview.

He complained that Morris had permitted votes to be held on motions calling for an industrial strategy for Canada and a new strategy for labor while many delegates still wanted to speak on the issue.

"They're going to ram this program through and it's no good," he said. "It doesn't go far enough."

After Tingley presented his views, Morris said he did not accept his opinions and Tingley expressed his displeasure with the thumbs-down sign.

Morris Sees Split Bid

QUEBEC (FP) — Increasing government attacks on public sector unions are part of a plan to split the trade union movement along public and private sector lines, Joe Morris, outgoing president of the Canadian Labor Congress, warned convention delegates Monday.

Morris, who will be succeeded as CLC head at the conclusion of the convention by Dennis McDermott, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, said federal plans to introduce a compensation comparability formula for the public sector are "insidious".

Such a scheme would reduce collective bargaining to "a regid, statistical game," he said.

"These controls are much more subtle and less obvious than the present AIB which makes them much tougher to fight."

Minister Dead

DETROIT (AP) — Rev. Barbara Andrews, 44, the first woman ordained as a minister in the American Lutheran Church, died Friday in a fire believed to have been caused by defective wiring, officials said Monday.

Air Control Appealed

MONTREAL (CP) — The Association des Gens de l'Air du Quebec has gone to court for the second time in its effort to overturn a 1976 federal transport department ruling restricting the use of French in air traffic communications.

Guy Bertrand, lawyer for the association of French-speaking pilots and air traffic controllers, told the Federal Court of Appeal Monday that the ruling issued in August, 1976, by Transport Minister Otto Lang violated the federal Official Languages Act and the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Bertrand acknowledged that the minister had the power to control air navigation, but argued that language did not fall within his power.

To deny French-speaking pilots and controllers the right to speak their own language in Quebec was a violation of the "cornerstone" article of the Official Languages Act, he said.

Lang handed down his ruling restricting French communications to seven small Quebec airports following a bitter strike waged by mainly English-speaking traffic controllers and pilots in the summer of 1976.

Under the plan, no future expansion of French was to be permitted except as recommended by a federal inquiry which has yet to make its final report.

Mr. Justice Louis Marceau of Federal Court later rejected a challenge by the Gens de l'Air ruling that under the Official Languages Act federal agencies were required to provide services in both official languages only "to the extent possible," a qualification he said was important.

Tories Battle Postal Rate Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservatives attacked Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne in the Commons Monday for illegally increasing postal rates at a time when the Post Office is giving slow mail service.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) accused Lamontagne of dealing with deficits by illegal rate increases rather than by the positive approach of improvements in service and marketing.

The Conservative postal critic said increasing postal rates by administrative order, as happened April 1, rather than by an amendment to the Post Office Act is a grave invasion of the rights of Parliament and an affront to the people of Canada.

Lamontagne said his department is continuously taking steps to improve the Post Office's major problems: labor-management relations and automation.

"We all know the Post Office is in a mess," said Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West), "but we didn't realize the extent of it."

He said the sheriff in the Ontario judicial district of Hamilton-Wentworth sent out notices to 70 persons to report for jury duty on Jan. 23, but 14 of the notices, sent by registered mail, have not yet been delivered.

DIEF BACKS PROTESTERS

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker went to bat in the Commons Monday for public servants campaigning against a government proposal they say would restrict their bargaining and strike rights.

In a toughly-worded motion Prince Albert Conservative sought action to alleviate "justifiable fear among members of the public service arising out of the deliberate and drastic actions of the government which indicate that the rights of the public service to collective bargaining are in jeopardy."

Diefenbaker asked MPs to protest and condemn the proposed new policy as "discriminatory and unjust in that the ending shortly of wage and salary controls will not apply to the public service."

HEROIN EYED FOR CANCER

HOUSTON (Reuter) — A New York hospital that specializes in cancer research will soon begin tests on the use of heroin to ease the pain of cancer.

The test by Memorial Sloan Kettering Hospital, announced Monday at a meeting of the American Cancer Society, is the first of its kind since President Jimmy Carter's health adviser, Dr. Peter Bourne, last year asked the government to study heroin use for cancer patients.

Dr. Kathleen Foley of Memorial Sloan Kettering said the study, sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse, is one of several seeking new ways of treating pain associated with cancer.

Turkey Aid Carter Aim

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will ask Congress to end a three-year arms embargo against Turkey and to approve $225 million in military aid to that country, the state department announced Monday.

The decision represents a major shift in administration policy, which has been to await Turkish concessions toward ending the Cyprus dispute before approving military aid.

The announcement, made in Washington and Ankara, also said Carter will ask Congress to authorize $140 million in military credits for Greece. The aid to the two North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies is for the fiscal year beginning in September.

The decision is designed to "strengthen our bilateral relations with Turkey and the NATO defence posture in the eastern Mediterranean," the announcement said.

It added that the four-year, $1-billion U.S. defence accord with Turkey, signed two years ago but never approved by Congress, would be renegotiated.

Meanwhile, the announcement said the administration "will renew its commitment to work for a just and lasting solution to the Cyprus problem" in presenting its program to Congress.

Government and congressional sources predicted an uphill battle to gain congressional approval of the plan.

Doubts Endure

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — The dreamer is dead a decade today. But the doubts endure: Did James Earl Ray fire the bullet that killed Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.?

"No," Ray told The Associated Press in an interview. But who did?

"That's difficult to say," Ray said. "But I think that all could be resolved fairly simply at some type of hearing or trial. Possibly the committee will be able to resolve it."

He referred to a House of Representatives committee conducting a new investigation. The first began April 4, 1968, in Memphis when a .30-06-calibre bullet was fired from a boarding house bathroom window to the Lorraine Motel's balcony. King, 39, fell with a severed spinal cord and died 59 minutes later.

"The FBI made an investigation and they were in a hurry to get it," Ray said.

MINI-PACER SAVES BABY

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A heart pacemaker said to be the smallest in the world has been fitted in a nine-month-old girl here and her mother says it has saved her life.

The Australian-designed device fitted to Natalie Wild at Birmingham Children's Hospital is 1½ inches long, an inch wide, a quarter-inch thick, weighs two ounces and cost $1,500.

Her mother Lorna Wild, 26, said: "I'm over the moon. Without this I'm sure Natalie would have died."

Mrs. Wild, who is married to 31-year-old college lecturer Bob Wild, added: "Natalie is our only child and the doctors have been marvellous. We will never be able to thank everyone enough."

The lithium-powered pacemaker, designed by the Sydney-based firm of Teletronics, was fitted in Natalie's chest last Wednesday but the operation was not announced until this week.

Natalie was born with a partially blocked heart. Before the device was fitted she needed drugs to keep her heart beat rate at more than 40 a minute.

Since the device was fitted her heart has maintained a steady 95 beats a minute.

The device was fitted in Natalie by heart surgeon Dr. Leon Abrams during a 2½-hour operation.

"She should be able to enjoy a normal life after this," he said.

The pacemaker uses tiny electrical currents to stimulate the heart and control the number of beats.

Natalie will carry it until she is six years old. Then doctors will decide whether she needs a larger version or can do without one at all.

S.A. Easing Apartheid?

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — South Africa's white government, in a new easing of apartheid, is reported planning to let blacks own property outside their tribal homelands and enroll in white church schools under certain circumstances.

The Johannesburg Star says Prime Minister John Vorster revealed the proposed change in the property regulations to a group of businessmen. It said one of them reported blacks will be allowed to buy and sell property in the government's black townships adjoining white cities and bequeath it to their heirs.

However, the source said they will not get the absolute title to the property which whites can get in white areas. Instead, since the township lands are owned by the government, they will be sold indefinite leases, or leaseholds in perpetuity.

Under the government's apartheid policy of strict racial separation, South Africa's 19 million blacks are citizens only of the 10 tribal homelands the government has set aside even though millions are born and live in the black townships surrounding the cities and have never seen the homelands.

The change in the property regulations will have to be approved by Parliament. But that is assured because Vorster's National party has an overwhelming majority.

PONTYPOOL WINS BAN ON KEPONE

PONTYPOOL, Wales (AP) — The British government has banned the import of 4,400 gallons of Allied Chemical's poisonous kepone from Baltimore, Md., to be burned experimentally on the outskirts of the south Wales industrial town of Pontypool.

Townspeople had threatened to besiege the local plant of Rechem International, the company hired by Allied Chemical to dispose of the chemical. It is licensed by the government to dispose of poisonous wastes and said it could convert kepone to "innocuous materials" by burning.

PREMIER TAKES POST

Davis Stripped of Power, But Bennett Keeps Mum

DAVIS
. . . continues as MLA

PREMIER BENNETT sworn in by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Premier Bill Bennett today took over Jack Davis' cabinet job but still refused to give specific reasons for dumping the minister of energy, transport and communications.

A grim-faced Bennett announced the firing of Davis Monday saying only he had taken the action after learning that Davis was being investigated.

Davis has also been stripped of his directorships — Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will become the government director on the board of B.C. Hydro and Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf takes over Davis' position on the B.C. Harbors Board.

Bennett was sworn in by Lieut.-Gov. Walter Owen in a brief ceremony this morning at Government House.

The premier again refused to answer questions concerning Davis' removal.

"The legislative assembly has been notified with what limited information I had. I think my statement was very clear," Bennett said.

Asked if he will make a more detailed statement soon, the premier said only he might.

The premier said his new portfolio will only be temporary. "I do not believe in dual portfolios."

He added he would be assuming the responsibilities of the ministry only as long as is necessary.

But he did say he will take the ministry's estimates through the house.

The premier stunned the legislature Monday afternoon by announcing he had called in Davis and asked him to resign his portfolio.

The only reason given by Bennett was that he had learned of an investigation over the weekend touching on the minister.

Bennett almost ran along the hallway outside the chamber after his announcement and refused to answer a barrage of questions fired at him by newsmen.

The firing left other cabinet ministers and MLAs dumbfounded.

Bennett told the house the resignation was neither a prejudgment of the matter by him nor an admission by Davis.

"It is, however, in accordance with the requirements for membership in the executive council."

Bennett said to comment further on the investigation might compromise its eventual outcome.

But NDP leader Dave Barrett said the premier owes the legislature and the public a full explanation.

"If he (Bennett) lets it stand, it gives rise to rumors and speculation which is entirely unnecessary and should be stopped. The only way would be with a full explanation."

Davis himself said little to clear the situation.

He first refused comment, saying he didn't fully understand the allegations.

The minister then said he had no idea whether the probe was of a political, civil or criminal nature or if it touched on his former federal ministries or his provincial cabinet post.

"I've got some idea, but I would rather not comment until I'm sure of the facts. All my information has been third hand."

He said he will not quit his seat because to resign from the legislature would be to admit wrongdoing.

But he said he left the cabinet to clear the atmosphere in the legislature.

Davis said he is confident he will be cleared.

Asked if he expects to be back in the cabinet, he said: "I hope so."

He said he first learned of the investigation Monday morning from Bennett.

PSAC Phone Pressure

Federal public service employees were urged Monday night to use their telephones to put the heat on politicians over proposed labor law changes.

About 200 people at a Public Service Alliance of Canada rally were given Prime Minister Trudeau's office number as well as the numbers for the four Vancouver Island MPs and some of their constituency officers.

"I suggest we tie up their lines," said John Hart, regional PSAC representative.

He said the constituency offices get upset because they can't get any work done.

The object of the exercise is to get the politicians to scrap Bill C-28, an Act to amend the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

The union feels the amendments will destroy the government employees' collective bargaining system.

PSAC president Andy Stewart appeared on TV screens at the front of the Quadra Street Union Centre hall and in a tape-recorded message pleaded with the members to pressure politicians by mail and through personal contact.

Hart told the members he was shocked to hear from Donald Munro, Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, that he does not approve of collective bargaining for public service employees.

Prime Rate Up to 8½%

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada raised its trend-setting bank rate Monday to 8.5 per cent from eight per cent as federal money managers acted to counter downward pressures on the Canadian dollar.

The increase, the second since March 9 and effective today, was cited by opposition critics as evidence of mismanagement of the economy by the Liberal government.

The increase in the rate was followed by the chartered banks, which adjusted their rates on loans in accordance with the Bank of Canada rate changes. That means higher interest rates for mortgages and loans to farmers and business..

Following the Bank of Canada increase, the major chartered banks increased their prime lending rate today to 9¼ per cent from 8¾ per cent, effective April 5.

Most banks also increased the rate payable on non-chequing savings to 6¾ per cent, an increase of ½ of one per cent.

In New York, the Canadian dollar was up 7-100 at $0.8804.

The dollar closed below 88 cents U.S. Monday for the first time since mid-1933, the worst year of the Depression.

The announcement also came after Finance Minister Jean Chretien said the government will have a budget this month.

Chretien also said Monday that the government:

—Had increased the amount which it can withdraw under a standby credit arranged with the chartered banks to $2.5 billion from $1.5 billion. The credit was set up to help support the dollar.

—Would undertake further foreign borrowing to replenish U.S. dollar reserves that have dwindled as federal authorities purchased surplus Canadian dollars from money markets.

GOV'T IN RED BY $7.849B

OTTAWA (CP) — The government incurred a $7.849 billion deficit in the first 11 months of the 1977-78 fiscal year ending March 31, finance department figures released today indicate.

Government revenues in the first 11 months totalled $28.927 billion while spending was $36.776 billion.

For the same period in the previous fiscal year there was a deficit of $4.326 billion.

OTTAWA TOUTS REFERENDUM

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government moved Monday to arm itself against any fuzzy or unfair Quebec referendum on separation, introducing legislation that would allow it to hold its own opinion-sampling votes on constitutional questions.

Moments later, Marc Lalonde, intergovernmental affairs minister, made clear that the bill is designed primarily as a political weapon against the separatist Parti Quebecois government.

At a news conference, he challenged Premier Rene Levesque's Quebec government to adapt its own legislation on referendums in light of the federal model. The provincial bill, Lalonde said, "unduly restricts freedom of association and freedom of speech."

The legislation was immediately denounced by Levesque as "a pre-election ploy." Speaking to reporters in Montreal, the Quebec premier said Trudeau wanted to wear "the mantle of the savior of Quebec."

Tentative Carter Veto Of Neutron Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Jimmy Carter has tentatively decided against the United States producing neutron weapons, it was learned today, although the West German foreign minister launched a last-minute drive to persuade Carter to modify that decision before it is officially announced.

As the West German official arrived, U.S. defence department sources said that in their view the president has not made a final decision on whether to order production of the weapon. Supporters of the weapon have said they would prefer that Carter defer any decision rather than rule against production.

At the White House, Carter official Claudia Townsend also denied that Carter has made any decision on producing the weapon.

However, it was understood that Carter relayed his tentative decision late last week to West Germany through Deputy State Secretary Warren Christopher.

After that, West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's visit was arranged as a final effort by the West Germans to talk the Carter administration out of its decision against neutron weapons, it was learned.

Genscher will tell U.S. officials that West Germany supports production of neutron weapons, his political party's defence expert, Juergen Moellemann, said.

The neutron weapon has a relatively small explosive force, confined to a radius of about 180 to 270 metres. But it yields twice the radiation of a regular nuclear weapon.

Cut Federal Grants For Porn — MP

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal MP called Monday for parliamentary control over the Canada Council to stop it from subsidizing pornography.

Hugh Anderson (Comox-Alberni) said some of the books published by Blue Ointment Press in Vancouver, and financed by Canada Council grants, amounted to "degradation of the printed word."

In a reflection of complaints that have been heard from both sides of the Commons recently, he said that at a time when a Commons committee is urging new laws to control pornography, a government agency should not be financing pornography.

The Canada Council is an autonomous agency that provides grants, scholarships and fellowships for work in the arts, social sciences and humanities. But Anderson and others have said it should not be advancing pornography.

He said the government followed the philosophy that political parties should not decide what is art. But its good faith in appointing council members with knowledge of art had not been rewarded. It was time to give Parliament some control over the council, at least in appointing its members.

MPs such as Simma Holt (L—Vancouver Kingsway), John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) and Jack Ellis (PC—Hastings) have complained most about books of poetry published by Blue Ointment Press, with names such as Street Flesh and Cock Tales.

The type of books published by this Vancouver firm "isn't even good pornography, it's bad pornography," Mrs. Holt said.

"I don't think anybody but the head of the Canada Council would see it as having any literary merit," she added.

Deadly Seizure

BELFAST (Reuter) — Police in Northern Ireland said Monday they have captured a U.S.-built M-60 machine gun, the most deadly weapon held by the Provisional-wing Irish Republican Army (IRA). Annie Surprises

Only a handful out of the thousands of entries in the Times-CJVI Academy Award contest correctly predicted Annie Hall, Richard Dreyfuss and Diane Keaton would win Oscars Monday night.

The Oscar to Annie Hall as best picture was the big surprise, and the big stumbling block for most entrants.

The draw for the trip for two to Hollywood will be made Wednesday, April 12, at the Capitol Theatre. Ten major secondary prizes will also be awarded at that time. Contestants do not have to be in attendance to win.

Invitations to the party are being mailed today and Wednesday. A total of 700 double passes are being awarded. Those who correctly guessed the three Oscar winners automatically qualify for a double pass.

Annie Hall, Star Wars Are Big Oscar Winners

Times News Services

HOLLYWOOD — Oscar celebrated his 50th birthday Monday night with a ceremony marked by political controversy and several major awards going to a man who was too nervous to show up.

Woody Allen's bittersweet remembrance of his life's love, Annie Hall, won four of the most important Oscars at the 50th Motion Picture Academy Awards show. Among them was Best Picture.

The 1977 runaway box office favorite, Star Wars, won six Oscars, most of them in technical categories, and a special award for sound effects.

Diane Keaton, a first-time nominee and Allen's former real-life sweetheart, was named Best Actress for her close-to-life portrayal of the flighty Annie Hall.

Richard Dreyfuss, also a first-time nominee, won a best actor Oscar for his portrayal of a frustrated actor sharing a New York apartment with an unwilling Marsha Mason in The Goodbye Girl.

Julia, a tale of underground efforts in Nazi Germany, based on a section of Lillian Hellman's Pentimento, won three Oscars, but another favorite, The Turning Point, was shut out.

There was controversy, courtesy of the best supporting actress winner, Vanessa Redgrave, for Julia. Miss Redgrave, whose nomination prompted protests from some quarters because of a pro-Palestinian documentary she financed, accepted her Oscar with the usual thanks and then told the academy:

"I think you should be very proud that in the last few weeks you've stood firm and you've refused to be intimidated by the threats of a small bunch of Zionist hoodlums whose behavior (here she was interrupted by a collective audience gasp) whose behavior is an insult to the stature of Jews all over the world."

Her comments later were attacked by playwright Paddy Chayefsky, who told the audience he was "sick and tired of people exploiting the occasion of the Academy Awards for the propagation of their own political propaganda."

He suggested to Miss Redgrave that "a simple thank you would have sufficed."

Outside, hundreds of Jewish and Arab protestors respectively denounced and praised Miss Redgrave.

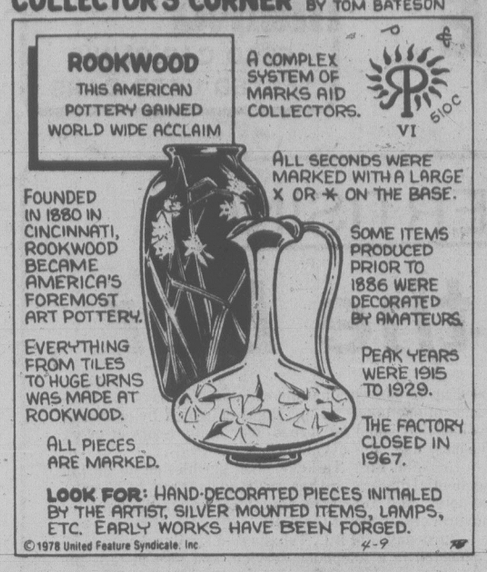
COLLECTOR'S CORNER BY TOM BATESON



Kids Mostly Puzzled By Newborns

By Virginia Lee Warren
New York Times

NEW YORK — The reactions of children on seeing their newborn brothers or sisters for the first time in the hospital are often surprising. After all, there has been very little time for adults to learn just how children do react to seeing newborns in the hospital; traditionally youngsters have been prohibited from visiting.

But now many hospitals are beginning to allow children to enter the maternity floor — some of the institutions starting the practice only in the last few months. One child, on seeing the newest member of his family, said, "I'd rather have a puppy."

Some of the reactions of 7-year-old Ken Ayugai were typical. He and 6-year-old Yoshiya had been confident they were going to have a baby brother. "They want to be the Three Musketeers," said their mother, Monika Ayugai.

And they got the baby brother all right — seven-pound Makoto. But they also got a baby sister, seven-pound Maya. The family had not expected twins. Ken, after one look through the glass in Roosevelt Hospital's nursery, said, "It's too much," and turned away.

As his parents — his father is Hidekuni Ayugai, executive vice-president of Dainippon Printing Company — continued to gaze fondly at their new offspring, Ken noticed that his mother's stomach, with its relaxed muscles, still protruded. "I think she's got two more in there," he said uneasily. Yoshiya shrugged, by this time resigned to accepting anything.

After Ken had been reassured, he went back to take another look at the little sleeping bundle that was his new brother. (The new sister was largely ignored.) All Ken could see was baby Makoto's head. "I thought he'd be bigger," said the 7-year-old. "He doesn't look as if he could ever play with me."

And in White Plains, when 3-year-old Kerry Anne Coleman took a present — a rattle — to her new baby sister, Deirdre Marie, she was disappointed and puzzled when Deirdre Marie, so wrapped in a blanket that only her tiny, doll-like head was visible, just lay there in the nursery of St. Agnes Hospital, without the slightest interest in the toy.

Yet Kerry Anne's mother, Marilyn Coleman, and her father, Thomas, chief systems analyst for Westchester County, thought they had gotten across to their 3-year-old what the reality would be like and that Kerry Anne knew what to expect.

In instance after instance, though, as talks with nurses in obstetrics units at a number of hospitals indicate, small children are simply unable to relate right off to anything as remote, tiny and helpless and, for the most part, motionless, as those little new beings done up in bundles behind the glass walls of nurseries.

Still the hospitals that permit post-partum visits from small children — and the number of hospitals is growing — consider them worthwhile, if only because they mean so much to the mothers. The women who have left little sons and daughters at home worry about the separation. And, the children seem far more interested in visiting with Mommy, and being assured that she is all right, than in seeing the new baby.

Ken and Yoshiya Ayguai take a peek at their new twin brother and sister

Women who stay in the hospital longer because of a Caesarian section are usually the ones most eager to have their children come to visit. (The Ayugai twins were delivered by this method.)

If the birth is a normal one, the mother goes home in three or four days (at Roosevelt it's usually in two) but, for a Caesarian patient, the stay will be from seven to 10 days. And from 20 to 25 per cent of all births in such large hospitals as New York, University and Roosevelt are now Caesarians. Less than 10 years ago, the figure was from 9 to 12 per cent.

The reasons offered for the rise in Caesarian births are varied, ranging from improved technology that alerts doctors to a fetus's problems to a reluctance these days to use forceps in delivering a baby.

And then there's the spectre of malpractice suits. As Dr. Robert H. Morris of University Hospital said, "You won't be sued if you do a Caesarian, but you might be if you don't."

Doctors and hospitals also have to pay attention to consumer demand, and it was this that persuaded some of them to let the small children come to see mother and the new baby.

New York Hospital pioneered in allowing such visits about eight or nine years ago, but the results then were disastrous. The children ran up and down the halls, switching the lights on and off, playing with other children instead of spending time with their mother and, in general, making a nuisance of themselves. "But now it's on a controlled basis," said Marie Strickland, supervising nurse in obstetrics. "We've got it carefully organized and it seems to be going well."

All the hospitals that permit such visits have set up strict schedules and time limits. In some of them the children may come only once.

Some staffs believe that the pain the children suffer in having to say goodbye to their mothers may negate the benefits of the visit. But this is something the families have to contend with.

What the hospitals have to contend with is the never-ending threat of infection. And there is one rule they intend to adhere to, regardless of the pressure from consumer demand: The children cannot be in the same room with the new baby; they cannot touch it or hold it but must continue to view it through the glass wall.

Fresh eggs left over from Easter? Be eggsactly right! If you scramble a few, beat them with water instead of milk and they'll have more moisture. Don't over-stir; doing so toughens the yolks. To get the most volume out of beaten egg whites, beat them when they are at room temperature. Don't beat them in a plastic mixing bowl; plastic tends to hold onto grease, which prevents whites from foaming well.

Once your Easter calla lillies stop blooming, keep encouraging the bulbs to grow with fertilizer and moist soil into July. Then gradually decrease watering so the bulbs can dry out for the rest of the summer. In September, repot them and start them growing again. The large green leaves make a fine houseplant even if no blossoms appear.

A rubber-backed throw rug shouldn't be a permanent dirt catcher on your vinyl floor covering, for the backing can permanently mark the flooring. Use this type of scatter rug on muddy days or change its place of duty frequently.

Fertilizer that greens your grass should not be used for evergreens. Lawn fertilizer is too high in nitrogen, which makes evergreens grow too fast and that makes them subject to diseases. An all-purpose fertilizer is best for them.

Davis Stripped of Power, But Bennett Keeps Mum

PREMIER BENNETT sworn in by Lt.-Gov. Walter Owen

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Premier Bill Bennett today took over Jack Davis' cabinet job but still refused to give specific reasons for dumping the minister of energy, transport and communications.

A grim-faced Bennett announced the firing of Davis Monday, saying only he had taken the action after learning that Davis was being investigated.

Davis has also been stripped of his directorships — Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will become the government director on the board of B.C. Hydro and Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf takes over Davis' position on the B.C. Harbors Board.

Bennett was sworn in by Lieut.-Gov. Walter Owen in a brief ceremony this morning at Government House.

The premier again refused to answer questions concerning Davis' removal.

"The legislative assembly has been notified with what limited information I had. I think my statement was very clear," Bennett said.

Asked if he will make a more detailed statement soon, the premier said only he might.

The premier said his new portfolio will only be temporary. "I do not believe in dual portfolios."

He added he would be assuming the responsibilities of the ministry only as long as is necessary.

But he did say he will take the ministry's estimates through the House.

The premier stunned the legislature Monday afternoon by announcing he had called in Davis and asked him to resign his portfolio.

The only reason given by Bennett was that he had learned of an investigation over the weekend touching on the minister.

Bennett almost ran along the hallway outside the chamber after his announcement and refused to answer a barrage of questions fired at him by reporters.

The firing left other cabinet ministers and MLAs dumbfounded.

Bennett told the House the resignation was neither a prejudgment of the matter by him nor an admission by Davis.

"It is, however, in accordance with the requirements for membership in the executive council."

Bennett said to comment further on the investigation might compromise its eventual outcome.

But NDP leader Dave Barrett said the premier owes the legislature and the public a full explanation.

"If he (Bennett) lets it stand, it gives rise to rumors and speculation which is entirely unnecessary and should be stopped. The only way would be with a full explanation."

Davis himself said little to clear the situation.

He first refused comment, saying he didn't fully understand the allegations.

The minister then said he had no idea whether the probe was of a political, civil or criminal nature or if it touched on his former federal ministries or his provincial cabinet post.

"I've got some idea, but I would rather not comment until I'm sure of the facts. All my information has been third hand."

He said he will not quit his seat because to resign from the legislature would be to admit wrongdoing.

But he said he left the cabinet to clear the atmosphere in the legislature.

Davis said he is confident he will be cleared.

Asked if he expects to be back in the cabinet, he said: "I hope so."

He said he first learned of the investigation Monday morning from Bennett.

PSAC Phone Pressure

Federal public service employees were urged Monday night to use their telephones to put the heat on politicians over proposed labor law changes.

About 200 people at a Public Service Alliance of Canada rally were given Prime Minister Trudeau's office number as well as the numbers for the four Vancouver Island MPs and some of their constituency officers.

"I suggest we tie up their lines," said John Hart, regional PSAC representative.

He said the constituency offices get upset because they can't get any work done.

The object of the exercise is to get the politicians to scrap Bill C-28, an Act to amend the Public Service Staff Relations Act.

The union feels the amendments will destroy the government employees' collective bargaining system.

PSAC president Andy Stewart appeared on TV screens at the front of the Quadra Street Union Centre hall and in a tape-recorded message pleaded with the members to pressure politicians by mail and through personal contact.

Hart told the members he was shocked to hear from Donald Munro, Conservative MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, that he does not approve of collective bargaining for public service employees.

Diane Keaton, a first-time nominee and Allen's former real-life sweetheart, was named Best Actress for her close-to-life portrayal of the flighty Annie Hall.

Richard Dreyfuss, also a first-time nominee, won a best actor Oscar for his portrayal of a frustrated actor sharing a New York apartment with an unwilling Marsha Mason in The Goodbye Girl.

Julia, a tale of underground efforts in Nazi Germany, based on a section of Lillian Hellman's Pentimento, won three Oscars, but another favorite, The Turning Point, was shut out.

There was controversy, courtesy of the best supporting actress winner, Vanessa Redgrave, for Julia. Miss Redgrave, whose nomination prompted protests from some quarters because of a pro-Palestinian documentary she financed, accepted her Oscar with the usual thanks and then told the academy:

"I think you should be very proud that in the last few weeks you've stood firm and you've refused to be intimidated by the threats of a small bunch of Zionist hoodlums whose behavior (here she was interrupted by a collective audience gasp) whose behavior is an insult to the stature of Jews all over the world."

Her comments later were attacked by playwright Paddy Chayefsky, who told the audience he was "sick and tired of people exploiting the occasion of the Academy Awards for the propagation of their own political propaganda."

He suggested to Miss Redgrave that "a simple thank you would have sufficed."

Outside, hundreds of Jewish and Arab protestors respectively denounced and praised Miss Redgrave.
